LINCOLN, May 29 -- (Special.)-With view to making his department one wor thy its name and one which may uitimately be classed with others which are a distinct benefit to the people of the state, Fire Warden Randall has started In to pay more than ordinary attention to ncendlary fires over Nebraska.

Since assuming control of that branch of the work the present warden and his deputies have been busy on several cases and already have made numerous improvements in the manner of conducting the affairs of the department. While the expense of the department is paid by the fire insurance companies doing business in the state, these companies are more than willing to do so on account of the fact that official investigations of fires supposed to be caused by incendiaries always follow. This the concerns themseives could not do without the cooperation of the state.

The tax levied on the fire companies brings in about $12,000 per year and goes to the support of Warden Randall's department exclusively. The investigations Bryan Has Conference saves the insurance companies much money through the disclosing of crooked work connected with blazes over the state.

In one case footprints which were followed by bloodhounds brought to the Meets Twenty Leading Politicians in scene of the fire by Warden Randall led to a discovery which in turn ended in the detection of a man who had fired a rival's store. Inquiry and investigation in another case showed that a stock of goods which were supposed to have aggregated close to $16,ington tonight held a conference with in value had been shipped into a town Representative Burton Harrison of New from some distance and that the freight York, Representative Hammil of New Jerbill receipted disclosed that only $71 had sey and about twenty other politicians. been required to move them on the rail-road. lay upon his glass counter. Taken somewhat aback by the procedure, the clerk opened the window of his cage and looked out. To the left nor right could he see any one who might have left the letter. He was just about to close the window when, looking down, he saw a little yellow head about a foot below the counter. As he gazed down the little head was thrown back and a dirty-faced urchin gazed upwards and his big blue eyes seemed to question the man above him. "What can I do for you, little man?"

asked the clerk. No answer. "I say, what can I do for you, little fellow?" again asked the clerk.

Rubbing a little hand across his eyes, the little fellow said: "Give mamma my letter. I want her to tum home." "Who is your mamma?" asked the clerk The question was repeated several times, and, finally, a broken voice said, "mamma."

The little child was taken into Assistant Postmaster Woodard and there placed on a desk and plied with questions, most of which were answered by a solemn gaze from great big blue eyes. "What is your name?" asked Mr. Woodard. In an almost inaudible whisper came the single word, "Tommie."

"Tommie what?"

"Jus' plain Tommie, tha's all." "Well, Tommie, where do you live?" was the next question. But the little fellow could not seem to tell. He was awakened and taken into the postmaster's office and placed on a couch. About a half hour later Mr. Woodard went to see how the little fellow was, and to his astonishment, found the couch unoccupied. A hurried look was made in the hall, but the urchin had disappeared from view. Returning to his desk, Mr. Woodard found the letter and opened it, which contained a piece of old paper with these words badly scribbled on it: "Mama com' nome i am lon'aum' Tommie."
