In reverence and patriotic memory Omaha yesterday did honor to the soldier dead. The city observed Memorial day as a holiday. Offices were closed, business houses remained open but half a day and throughout the downtown section the pulse of business activity was at its lowest ebb. Special services and decorating cere-monies were held at the cemeteries about Omaha, Council Bluffs and South Omaha. The holiday was made the date, too, of the opening function at the Omaha Rod and Gun club, while at other suburban and country resorts special affairs and tournaments were held.

A parade of the veterans of the Grand Army, the Spanish-American war and various other military organizations was held.
