the arguments and compared them with the actual statistics, and also because of similar experience that the people of the United States have had in respect to the adoption of partial reciprocity with Cuba, and of complete reciprocity with Porto Rico and the Philippines.

it was necessary for the goat to steer his course. Freedom from the necessity of steering should add five miles an hour to the speed of a crazy goat, four miles an hour to the speed of a hungry goat and three and one-half miles an hour to the speed of a normal goat.

PUTS MOTOR CAR IN DISCARD

John Jennings of Greenwood, Ind., has indicated a vehicle for riding the goat sort of auto-goat arrangement, in which the goat is provided with perfect freedom of action, yet is properly restrained for the purpose of propelling one rider.

The Jennings auto-goat vehicle is the 500,400th vehicle registered in the patent office at Washington, but the chief clerk of the bureau declares that the 500,400th earlier vehicular patents are humdrum affairs compared with the auto-goat tri-cycle. The Jennings patent is as great a revolution of its kind as was the automobile, and is fraught with tremendous possibilities.

With elaborate attention to detail the Indiana inventor has devised a machine that reduces friction to a minimum, enabling the propelling goat to achieve a far greater speed when in harness and carrying one passenger than he would normally acquire while speeding at large and unhampered.

The rider does not actually ride the goat. The saddle is ingeniously supported above and clear of the goat's back. The rider's feet are placed on rests projecting from the axle of the front wheels. His hands are supported upon handbars. A bridle is provided to rein in the goat, but not to steer with. The rider steers the machine by the handbars, so that all the goat has to do is to go.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND TRULY Girl Who Posed for the Picture Book Became Bride of Artist.

Alice of Wonderland fame has just returned married. She and her husband returned from their honeymoon trip a day or two ago and were warmly welcomed by the younger social set of Leona, N. J., where the young couple will reside. She is now Mrs. Howard McCormick, wife of an artist of growing repute. She was Miss Josephine Newell. Her father is Peter Newell, the author and illustrator.

When Mr. Newell was illustrating Carroll's "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass and What Alice Found There," he utilized his charming little daughter, now bigger but still charming, as the model for his drawings, which became familiar to many thousands of readers. Her features have changed but slightly since those childhood days, less than a decade ago. She is still extremely girlish, even when singing in the Presbyterian choir at Leona.

Mr. McCormick, who captured the fair "Alice" as his bride, is a brother of Frederick McCormick, the Russo-Japanese war correspondent, artist and author. As an artist, the bridegroom has gained a reputation both in color and pen and ink work. He is also a clever wood engraver—New York World.

"I should like to chat with you awhile, Mrs. Duggan," says the young woman who has taken up settlement work, according to Judge "I want to talk with you about the 'Arye' one of them officers?" interrupts Mrs. Duggan, without taking her hands from the washbasin. "Well, in a sense, that is my hope. 'Well, I've just this to say, I was one day behind with my washbasin, and I was weak because of helpful visits, committee ladies and from here on then that wants to improve my condition in life will either have to do 'the wash' while I sit in the bath, or else to resist an hour or two hearing them through with an interested 'an apron' expression."

WOMEN AND THEIR HOMES

Beauty and Individuality May Be Expressed Simply.

PROBLEM OF KNOWING HOW

Money & Convenience, Not Essential in Making the Home Beautiful—Personal Tastes Preferable to Copies.

Women who have succeeded in making their homes not only beautiful, but livable, and in so doing have stamped upon them the marks of their personality, have attained the ideal in house-furnishing and home-making. Not to achieve that result is to fall dismally, no matter how perfect the harmony of the effect.

If our homes welcome our friends with an indefinable sense of our presence, inviting them to enter and linger comfortably by the open fire, with a favorite book, whether we are present or not, then our object has been attained, although it may have been done so unconsciously. If their inclination, when we are not at home, is to retire precipitately, from a too-cold and well ordered house, or if they enter it with the feeling that it may as well be the house of Mrs. DeWitt's, then it is time for us to realize that it is a furnished house rather than a home, and it is time for us to try and give it a soul. Individuality is by no means sufficient by itself. Many very unattractive homes express that without any accompanying feeling for the beautiful. Beauty is an essential quality. All women, unfortunately, are not born with the ability to make their homes beautiful. They need assistance and training; moreover, to accept assistance and take a training need not by any means endanger their individuality of expression, as so many seem to fear.

Furnishing a house is an artistic work, and all women, alas, are not artists. They require training in the technique of their art as much as the man who wants to paint pictures requires training in the technique of his art. Moreover, while he is supposed to have been born with the sense of color and beauty as an inspiration for his work, she may not even have that essential quality to start with. She may be obliged to learn to recognize the beautiful, feeling it over and over. Fortunately very few women fail to appreciate it when they see it, but, alas, examples of beautiful house-furnishing are not scattered broadcast for them to observe. Nature spreads its lessons on all sides, but the artist work in these schools to come directly to the university. Instead, they must take a supplementary course in a four-year accredited school in order to attain the required standing.

The change in the rule strikes with the most severity students in towns where only three-year high school courses are provided. It will be impossible for such students to continue their student work in these schools to come directly to the university. Instead, they must take a supplementary course in a four-year accredited school in order to attain the required standing. The senate's action is one of a series of acts which have raised the admission standards during the last three years. Formerly it required only twenty-eight points for full admission, with twenty-two points as a conditional requirement. In the latter case the student agrees to make up the required points as soon as possible, but not later than the end of the following year. Two years ago the two requirements were raised to thirty and twenty-four points respectively.

COMMISSION COMPLAINS ABOUT COAL RATE CHARGED

Nebraska Body Files Objections with Interstate Board Against Union Pacific.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, June 3.—(Special.)—Following up its suit against the Union Pacific for reduction of coal rates from Colorado, the State Railway commission has filed complaint with the Interstate Commerce commission against the Burlington, Colorado & Southern and the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad companies to require them to transport coal from the Walsenburg coal fields in Colorado to southern Nebraska at a lower rate than is now charged. This action is before the commission on complaints by Nebraska coal dealers, but as it is interstate business nothing could be done in the matter by them. The $3.50 rate to certain points the commission desires reduced to $3.00 and $3.25 and the $3.75 rate they desire lowered to $3.50. In the Union Pacific case of some time ago the commission was successful.

Senator Cummins at Head of the List of Those Applying for Pardon for Him—Albia to Get the Miners.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, June 3.—(Special.)—Telegrams—Application for a parole for Charles Thomas, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for murder from this city was presented to Governor Carroll today. The petition sets forth the belief of the signers that Thomas is absolutely innocent and that the testimony did not conclusively show that he murdered Mabel Scofield twenty years ago. The list is headed by Senator Cummins and includes the names of many of the most prominent persons here. The murder had been an unusually distressing one and a big reward was offered for the conviction of some one. Thomas was arrested at the time and released, but five or six years later was arrested and convicted after he had been living here quietly during all the time.

University Raises Its Requirements For Admission

Senate Passes Resolution that Will Shut Out Small Schools with Three-Year Course.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, June 3.—(Special.)—Standards of admission to the state university have been materially raised, according to the announcement of Registrar Harrison today. By action of the university senate, twenty-eight high school credits will hereafter be required for conditional admission to the colleges of arts and science, of engineering and of agriculture. Full admission requires thirty points, as heretofore, but in the future twenty-four points will not be accepted as sufficient high school preparation for entrants who wish to become candidates for degrees.

The change in the rule strikes with the most severity students in towns where only three-year high school courses are provided. It will be impossible for such students to continue their student work in these schools to come directly to the university. Instead, they must take a supplementary course in a four-year accredited school in order to attain the required standing.

The senate's action is one of a series of acts which have raised the admission standards during the last three years. In the latter case the student agrees to make up the required points as soon as possible, but not later than the end of the following year. Two years ago the two requirements were raised to thirty and twenty-four points respectively.

Following is the text of the senate's resolution:

No. 1. After September 1, 1912, twenty-eight points shall be the minimum requirement for conditional admission to the college of arts and sciences, engineering and agriculture in the university.

No. 2. There shall be maintained a list of high school credits on the basis of three years of secondary school work. The graduates of these schools may receive conditional admission to the university upon the completion of sufficient additional work in an accredited school to secure the minimum of twenty-eight points.

Contractor Sundell Held Not Guilty of Killing Harry Drefs

Jury in District Court After Several Hours' Deliberation Returns Verdict in Manslaughter.

Not guilty, was the verdict by the jury in the Sundell manslaughter case in district court yesterday evening at 8 o'clock, after several hours' deliberation. Carl E. Sundell, a contractor and real estate dealer, was on trial for having run down and killed last summer with an automobile, Harry Drefs, a 5-year-old boy.

Throughout the trial Sundell sat in the court room surrounded by his family, a sister of his wife, two little boys and a little girl. A strong plea for mercy made by J. H. Van Deusen, Sundell's counsel, seemed to score heavily with the jury. The defense was that the accident was unavoidable, the Drefs boy, who was playing upon the street, dodging exactly in front of the machine.

James P. English, county attorney, pled up what he called practically a monument of undisputed evidence to show that Sundell was running at twenty-five to thirty miles an hour, far in excess of the speed limit.

The accident occurred at Twenty-sixth and Hamilton streets on July 21 of last summer. Harry Drefs was the son of William Drefs, a cigarmaker.

The speed limit for that section was placed by the county attorney at ten miles an hour, a restriction by law for closely built up sections where the houses are less than 100 feet apart on an average.
