GYPSIES IN WEIRD CEREMONY

Nomad Lovers United Amid Chants, Fights and Cold Beer.

WILD FLOWER CROWN FOR BRIDE

Justification Starts Early in Morning, to Last Three Days, but Waterloo Officials "Wink Up" Party on Sat.

As the sun rose over the hill tops Thursday morning two bands of Gypsies met on the banks of the Elkhorn river near Waterloo. Salutations were exchanged, and in silence horses were unhitched and staked in the tall grass. Fires were lighted and preparations for breakfast begun. It was the beginning of a three-day wedding ceremony.

One band hailed from Brazil, South America, and the other consisted of nomads of the United States. The bride-elect was a belle of the South American band, and the groom is a member of the northern nomads. All the attendants and witnesses were dressed in gaily apparel, consisting of all the bright colors of the rainbow.

All morning the camp was a scene of great activity and many people from the town of Waterloo went out to look on. Shortly after dinner everything was in readiness for the ceremony. A tall man in a somber black suit, who had remained in a wagon all morning appeared on a green plot which had been roped off. From another tent came five men with musical instruments. The lovers came from other wagons, and amid weird music walked to the plot.

Merry with Songs.
The 100 Gypsies now began to make merry with songs. A tall man, who evidently was the priest in charge, began to chant. The noises kept up for about fifteen minutes, when another Gypsy came from a wagon with a huge flagon, which he passed first to the bride-elect and then to the man. Both drank heavily and then it turned it upside down on the grass. Then, taking the couple by the hands, he held them aloft and began singing and bowing. For some time he did this and then clasping the hands of the lovers, he chanted a few words. Immediately upon the closing of the chant the musicians started a lively tune and the whole gathering began dancing.

Dancing was followed by drinking from several kegs of beer which had been shoved into the roped square. The groom filled glasses and passed one to each Gypsy. Singing a song, the groom emptied his glass, as did the others. The bride was then bedecked with a crown of wild flowers. A long chain of brass disks was placed about her neck and the beer was opened for all.

About 5 o'clock in the afternoon the ceremonies became such that the citizens of the town applied to the marshal. He spoke to the groom and the noise subsided for a time. Later a fight started, to which the groom was badly cut up. The marshal appeared again on the scene and gave the band two hours to leave town. The sheriff from Omaha was also appealed to and late at night the Gypsies moved away to complete the other two days of the ceremony.

An Obliging Couple Runs Away With Grip of Aged Woman

Make Get-Away with Grip Which They Offer to Carry Between Stations.

Mrs. Lizzie Stroud, an aged woman from Peoria, Ill., was robbed of a suitcase containing $14 and her gold watch by a young man and woman whom she became acquainted with on a Burlington train coming to Omaha Thursday. The young couple was very solicitous for the welfare of Mrs. Stroud and volunteered to carry her fittings from the Burlington depot to the Union depot. Before reaching the latter the man and woman ran away with the suitcase and have not been seen since. The matter has been reported to the police, but up to a late hour Friday no trace of the couple had been found. Mrs. Stroud says she was fortunate to have her suitcase checked and some other money or she would have been stranded in Omaha.

The New 1912 Model Detroit Ideal With the Popular "Common-sense" Finish

Since we have had a few days of real summer weather we have numerous testimonials as to the great superiority of the "Cold Storage" over other makes used by neighbors of "Cold Storage" users as to consumption of ice and keeping foods untainted.

Results are what count. This is what a user says: Mrs. C. M. Schneckenberger, 2518 Maple. "It is certainly a pleasure to use a Cold Storage. Foods are always sweet and untainted and the ice bill is a mighty small item."
