

MURDER OF ARRAST MYSTERY

Tragedy Probably Will Not Be Solved, Though Police Work Hard.

THIS DETECTIVE NOT A VIDEOC

Mlle. Amelie Lhermitte, Well Known Parisian Artist, Murdered by Her Brother in Most Brutal Way.

PARIS, June 17.—(Special to The Bee.)—The mystery concerning the death of D'Arrest is likely to remain unsolved, although the police have been doing everything men can do to run down the assassins who slew him. More is not known of the circumstances in which he was last seen. This, curiously enough, was only a short time before his clothes were discovered on the bridge near the Quai Debilly, where he had called on his cousin, Maitre Zoeger, a lawyer who lives opposite the foot bridge. He had left Zoeger to take the train. The victim had left Evreux in the morning with the intention of staying only a few hours here. His movements were known up to the very moment almost of his disappearance. After that complete mystery prevails, as in the case of the famous Steinhilff affair.

Movements All Open. The sudden vanishing of such a well known personage has aroused no end of speculation, but all the indications as at present known, point to a strange crime. D'Arrest called on his solicitor, Maitre Tolu, after he reached this city. They chatted about various things and among others a will case in which D'Arrest was interested. At noon he went to lunch. In the afternoon he called at his printer's, and then returned to a cafe, where he had an appointment with a friend who was unable to meet him.

After dinner he paid a surprise visit to his cousin, Maitre Zoeger. Then, taking out his watch suddenly, he exclaimed that he had been staying longer than he had intended, and that he would have to catch his train. An hour later two concierges found his coat and hat on the footbridge hardly more than a stone's throw from Maitre Zoeger's home. The only supposition that can be made is that he was attacked and murdered immediately on leaving his cousin's house.

Indecency on the Stage. A well known Englishman who spent several weeks here writes: "It is the height of discourtesy for a French theater to permit things upon the stage which must shock a large proportion of the audience. Not long ago I went, for the second time, to a music hall here which is visited by hundreds of English people every evening. In the middle of the show was a hopelessly indecent and ugly exhibition. French people in the audience were disgusted at it. The manager's only excuse for it was that the show had been running a long time, and the thing that I objected to had been put in to brighten it up and that he had not seen the change in the program himself."

Detective Not a Videoq. A strange story is told of a detective who was guided about in a foreign country by an alleged murderer whom he was sent to arrest. A man named Valet is accused of having shot the director of an asylum at Aix, last September. He fled to Buenos Ayres, and the police, having traced him, sent a detective to secure his arrest. As the fugitive was a Corsican, the detective at once sought out some Corsicans on his arrival in Buenos Ayres to help him in his search. He found one man who was exceedingly complacent, and who for days plotted him about the city in quest of the fugitive from justice. Suddenly this amiable guide disappeared, and the detective greatly regretted his loss. He will probably regret it more now, when he learns that his guide was the very man that he wanted. In a letter written by Valet from Buenos Ayres to someone here and intercepted by the police, he relates with great delight how he led the detective about in search of himself. But fearing that sooner or later he might be detected, he thought it safer to vanish.

Fall of a French Belfry. A famous old belfry from which the bells rang out for the wedding between Henry V of England and Catherine, daughter of Charles VI of France, has just fallen in Troyes. The belfry, which was built in the thirteenth century, formed part of the church of St. Jean. It has been unsafe for some time, and its fall was expected. A thousand persons witnessed the accident, which happened at 4 o'clock in the morning. It toppled over and fell with a crash on a house opposite.

Brother Murders Sister. A well-known Parisian artist, Mlle. Amelie Lhermitte, was murdered by her brother in a most brutal way.

Mlle. Lhermitte, who had exhibited at the Paris salon for the last ten years, winning medals and other honors, received a letter from her brother, who lives at Angers, asking her to pay him a visit. She went to him and spent the night there. Early the next morning she was seen at her bedroom window screaming for help, while her brother was attacking her savagely with an axe. When the house was entered Mlle. Lhermitte was dead. The brother declared that, being destitute, he had asked his sister to die with him and that she had refused, so he had killed her.

Husband Set Free. A wealthy shoemaker and shoe dealer, who strangled his wife in a fit of passion, caused by her unfaithfulness, has been acquitted. The couple managed to elude the police during his absence she had an intrigue with an ex-policeman. The first intimation of his wife's conduct was conveyed to the shoemaker in an anonymous letter. It was written by the woman's lover, who wanted to get rid of her. As he was a friend of the husband, he went to the house to see the effect that the letter had produced. Before his arrival there had been an explanation between husband and wife. The result was her death.

BOLD ROBBERY COMMITTED IN CONSTANTINOPLE CAR

Old German Lady is Robbed in a Compartment on Pretext of a Cure.

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 17.—(Special to The Bee.)—An audacious robbery has been committed in a Constantinople tramway car, the victim being a German lady. In these vehicles a compartment is curtained off for the use of women, who are forbidden by the Koran to associate in any way with men. The German lady, who speaks Turkish, entered the women's compartment of a tramway car and fell into conversation with the three black veiled figures it already contained. She told them how she suffered from rheumatic pains in the arms. The shrouded hanoouli sitting next to her listened with sympathy. She then, it appeared, had been similarly afflicted, but was now completely cured. Her doctor had recommended her, whenever she rode in a tramway car, to hold her arms rigidly straight out in front of her.

The joining of a Constantinople tramway car, operating on the stretched muscles, had a physiological effect that completely eliminated rheumatic trouble. "On the

LAURA LAIRD.

THE Lloyd Ingraham company will present at the Gayety this week, "The Road to Yesterday," which combines with the modern a period dating back 300 years and affording opportunity for the costuming and gallantry of that age. "The Road to Yesterday" was one of the greatest Broadway successes of recent seasons and has only been seen in Omaha at a high scale of prices. The entire action of the play hinges on a mystic, strange happening that takes place on a midsummer eve. Elspeth Tyrell, a young American lady who is visiting friends in London, after an exciting day of sight-seeing, falls asleep in an artist's studio and wishes that she lived 300 years ago in the Elizabethan period. England, when men were braver, women fairer and life was full of romance. Being midsummer eve, her wish comes true and she wanders back on the road to yesterday three centuries, and in the second act sees herself and her friend of the studio as they might have been in the reign of King James I. In a most charming comedy she goes through most of the adventures of the heroines of the romantic fiction, only they earnest recommendation of her Turkish companion the German lady immediately put this cure to the test. For a quarter of an hour she rode with arms well stretched out straight in front of her. Then the veiled Turkish lady alighted, recommending a continuance of the treatment. As her adviser disappeared the patient reached for her satchel hanging at her belt, but found that it had gone and with it her purse. By this time the veiled lady whose face the other had not even seen, was also out of sight.

Cynical Remarks. The fellow who is always on the fence doesn't carry much weight. A fellow naturally feels cast down when he is on his uppers in front of her. Then naturally the doctor likes his patients to be well heeled. Tell a girl that she has a pretty nose and she will become cross-eyed from constantly looking at it. We live and learn. Until I became an inmate of a boarding house I never knew there were so many stowed prisoners in the world. If it were not for their long faces some people have an idea the world wouldn't know they were religious. If you make a fool of yourself don't take it too much to heart. The world is full of people who are kidding themselves.—New York Times.

We Are Distributors For EVERYTHING ELECTRICAL

Hotpoint

The iron that has turned ironing day from a day of drudgery to a day of comparative pleasure. No other electric iron—or iron of any kind—has the hot point, the cool handle, the attached stand, the two year guarantee.

An Electric Toaster

This is a very handy article in a great many ways. You can make toast just have never made before. The bread is inclined on racks in front of the glowing coils and very soon shows a faint blush of color, then a deeper brown, and shortly you have the crispiest toast you ever ate. The set on the top is very useful for heating coffee, water and numerous other things.

EL STOVO

This is an electric stove which can be used in the kitchen or on the dining room sideboard or table. Also very useful in the sick room. Fully nickel plated, with a lower shelf which prevents the heat from injuring the most highly finished china. Legs tipped with fiber. Let us show you one in operation.

THE "ELECTROCURL"

Self heating electric curling iron. Curls made with the "Electro-curl" are fluffy and natural. No gum or soot to make the hair sticky. No uneven heat to break, streak or discolor the hair.

FUN LEADER AT THE ROME SUMMER GARDEN.

BABE LA TOUR.

Babe La Tour, the favorite New York comedienne, is the special feature this week at the Rome summer garden. She has played in all the leading New York theaters, as well as the best all over the country, starting in "The Follies" during the season of 1910-11. Miss La Tour is a natural comedienne, being the same off the stage as she is on the stage, and will sing all of the latest songs that have made a great hit in New York. Miss Marie Snowden, the talented young Omaha girl, in an entirely new act, will also be one of the attractions. The Virginia trio, black comedians, will be retained for another week and appear in a new sketch, which includes several late hits, some clever dancing and bright comedy. Billy Weston (boy pianist) and Leo Hickman (baritone), who have scored such an artistic success, will continue to delight the people. Several entirely new illustrated songs will be included in their act this week. The Rome orchestra of sterling musicians will give a program each evening and will be pleased to play any desired number. The Photo-Plays are the latest and best, and in many instances are not only vastly entertaining but highly educational as well. Comparatively few Omaha people realize what a delightful entertainment is being given every evening at this cool and beautiful garden. It is high class in every particular and vastly superior to the class of entertainment usually afforded in summer gardens, the desire of the management being to cater to the refined people. The guests may dine or partake of other refreshments as they enjoy the progress of the entertainment. A massive electric fountain in which the waters shift from one color to another and in which the glistening play constantly forms a pretty centerpiece to the garden.

entirely in Mr. Lewis' favor, and a difficulty is expected in getting any jury to convict him.

An organized endeavor to lynch the culprit in another case is reported from the village of Bergville, in Natal.

Two ladies were driving home from tennis along a country road when they were held up by a native, who attempted to molest them. The ladies defended themselves and the native bolted.

Indignation meetings were afterwards held in this district. The culprit was arrested and 150 armed mounted farmers assembled outside Bergville at midnight and demanded the surrender of the prisoner. The police, being forewarned, had removed the prisoner to Ladysmith.

The foregoing cases and others are forcing the whole problem on public attention, and while the public generally is opposed to lynchings, it is feared that the tendency in that direction will be dangerously increased unless ordinary lawful measures soon place a check on what is regarded as a growing menace.

Almost a Case of Contempt. The attorney for the prosecution mopped his perspiring brow. "Your honor," he said, "in view of the stifling heat I suggest that we suspend proceedings in this trial for a day or two and give the weather a chance to moderate." This brought the attorney for the defense to his feet. "But the jury—" "Oh, let the jury go hang!"
