MUCH ACTIVITY IN LONDON

Social Functions Following Coronation Are to Be Many. ENGLISH QUEEN IS NOT DOWDY Relations Between Buckingham and Potsdam Are Evidently More Amicable Than in Days of King Edward. BY LADY MARY MANSWORTH. LONDON, June 17.—(Special to The Bee.)—The coronation of King George and Queen Mary will have passed into history by the end of another week and society will soon settle down into its accustomed rut. By reason of the presence of so many of the high-placed ones of the world at the coronation, of whom a goodly proportion will remain for a time, there will be more activity in society than usual, but it will be in quantity rather than quality that the difference will be noted. While the organized entertainments which have been a marked feature of this coronation have had little effect socially, there is no doubt that the hotelkeepers, tradesmen and others who have sought to make this function a get-rich-quick medium have overreached themselves. The crowd of foreigners, especially of Americans, have been nowhere near what had been expected. They simply decided that the game was not worth the candle and stayed away. The efforts which were made to undo the evil caused by stories of high prices which went out were unavailing. Queen is Not Dowdy. The fact that Queen Mary has firmly turned her face against the hobble skirt, the jewels-encrusted and similar sartorial luxuries should not create the impression among American women that her majesty is the least dowdy. I noticed particularly the royal ladies at the recent command performance of "Money," at which the imperial German visitors were guests of the British king and queen. The German empress wore a satin gown of a lovely shade of pink violet, over which was a long satin cloak of exactly the same shade as her gown, and a large white hat trimmed with ostrich feathers completed a very distinguished toilette. Queen Mary wore a lovely shade of pale Cambridge blue, with a white bo-a round her neck and a hat wreathed with roses in shades of blue and pink, mauve and other contrasting tones. Princess Louise was dressed in a white, soft silk faintly flowered with water blue design, and had a large white hat, the brim being lined with black velvet, and the gloves trimmed with white feathers, and Princess Mary wore a girlish costume of a shade of pink alpaca and a hat trimmed with ostrich feathers. Gladstone's Granddaughter. A good deal of interest will be occasioned by the engagement of Miss Dorothy Drew to Captain Parsh, who is one of the aides-de-camp of her uncle, Lord Gladstone, the governor general of South Africa. Miss Drew recently developed a lung weakness, but it has been cured by the dry, rarified air of South Africa. She is the only daughter of the late Cannon Drew, who married Miss Mary Gladstone, the daughter of the "grand old man" and the friend of Ruskin. The late Mr. Gladstone was very fond of her and she was one of the consolations of his old age. When a child her family little figure was a familiar one to the large parties of political trippers whose Mecca was Hawarden castle and where her parents for some years resided with Mr. Gladstone. The late Cannon Drew was like a son to Mr. Gladstone in the last few years of his life. Cousins Getting Closer. The relations between Buckingham palace and Potsdam are evidently more amicable than they used to be in the uncle and nephew days of King Edward. But I refuse to speculate upon the question whether there is anything in the idea of marrying Princess Louise of Prussia, who will be 19 in September, to the prince of Wales, who will be 17 on the coronation Friday. I will only say that if the young lady likes to select England for her home, she will be very welcome, nor will she be under any necessity to change her religion, as would be the case if she married a Hapsburg. My view of the subject has always been that the prince of Wales should choose the lady that will make him the best wife, even if the bride be drawn from the British aristocracy only, but not include Dalry's and the Galety among the "British aristocracy." Bridge is Losing Ground. Bridge is losing its hold lately. Recently an inquest was held on a Streatham lady who committed suicide after losing some rubbers at bridge. It was stated that she was, as a rule, a first rate player, but that on the evening of her death she played very badly and lost games she should have won easily. This tragedy is another example of the unsuitability of card games to the feminine temperament. Many women are admirable bridge players, as far as mere skill and knowledge are concerned, but they are nearly all bad losers. They are too emotional, and too easily upset by the outrageous tricks that fortune so often plays. This is really a reason why bridge has lost its popularity and is so rapidly falling out of fashion. When the game was at the height of its vogue its supporters were mainly women. Mixed card clubs, i. e., clubs where men and women could meet for bidge, sprang up all over London. Strain Too Much. But the women could not stand the strain. The game got on their nerves and the clubs being pleasant for social gatherings, degenerated into nagging and hysterical institutions. There were no suicides, but there were minor tragedies in abundance. Husbands complained that their wives returned home from their bridge clubs in a state of nervous tension that made conversation impossible. The nagging that was merely exasperating at the card table became utterly intolerable when transferred to the home. In a number of cases the domestic peace was irrevocably shattered, but the more usual ending was resignation from the club which caused all the mischief. The last couple of years have seen the closing of half a dozen of the principal mixed card clubs in London, and bridge as a social relaxation is apparently doomed. At a big private dance given in London last week there was a room set especially apart by the hostess for bridge, but it failed to attract a single player. The reign of bridge is over. Nobility at School. Among the boys who are this term wrestling with Euclid and Horace at Eton and who are superior to the fascinations of the "guck shop" are two princes and no fewer than sixteen youthful lords, who among them will one day divide fifty-three titles, lord it over 800,000 acres—an area three and a half times that of the entire County of Middlesex, and, roughly, as large as Cheshire or Nottinghamshire—and will be able to pick and choose among forty-two of the most palatial "pleasure houses" in the United Kingdom. Probably the most envious of these aristocrats in Eton jackets is the marquis of Harrington, heir to all the vast possessions of the Cavendishes, with their dukedom and five other titles of peerage. He will have six magnificent mansions in England, one alone which is said to be worth £2,000,000, and a seventh in Ireland. His pictures alone at Chatsworth, Hardwicke, and Devonshire House represent more than a king's ransom, and the land that will call him lord will be more than Rutland thrown in. CHURCH IS ACTIVE SOCIALLY Declared that Church is Awakening to Newer Activities. COAT-OF-ARMS IS REDECORATED First Convention of Federal Council of Lutheran Brotherhood, Held Recently in Washington, Was Successful. BY D. V. FRANCES. NEW YORK, June 17.—(Special to The Bee.)—Perhaps the most interesting phase of modern church work, next to the great missionary revival, is the energy with which churches of all denominations are taking up social service. I am not at all sure that the two are part of one whole. The church is waking to the fact that to be a vital force in the world it must get out into the world and take the lead in those things which help to make the world better and the conditions which humanity must work out its destiny more tolerable. There is a danger in this awakening, too, which must not be overlooked. In helping mankind physically, which is its duty, the church must not lose sight of the fact that its prime mission is to help man spiritually. The other, while right and important, is after all a side issue, a by-product in the language of commerce. Possibly the tendency toward hereby noted in many of the evangelical churches is due to the tendency to put the lesser ahead of the greater. Cardinal Gibbons' Arms. Cardinal Gibbons' coat-of-arms, presented to him recently by the Faculty fathers at the Catholic club, has been redecorated by William L. Harris. It has been placed at the top of the cardinal's throne in the cathedral. The work took months in the artist's studio. The coat-of-arms shows a crozier and a cross. On the shield that bears the coat-of-arms quartered in the American red, white and blue are the stars of liberty, the cross of the church and the scallop of St. James, the patron saint of the cardinal. On the shield, inlaid with gold and silver, are the colors indicating the rank and nationality of the only American cardinal. Lutheran Brotherhood. The first convention of the Federal Council of the Lutheran Brotherhood in the United States, held in Washington, was most successful. The convention theme was "organization for service." The Lutheran Brotherhood is a creature of the general synod. Action looking to its organization was taken at the last convention of the latter body at Richmond, Ind., in 1909. Preliminary steps were taken in February of that year and a report was made of the condition of men's work in the church. The general synod indorsed the movement and appointed a committee to have general oversight and effect a federation of all the men's societies into a general organization for the entire church. The Lutheran Brotherhood is in line with the federation of men's organizations in the various denominations. The first of these was the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, in the Episcopal church, organized in 1888. Then followed in rapid succession the Brotherhood of Andrew and Philip, the United Presbyterian men's movement, the Methodist Brotherhood, and Presbyterian Brotherhood, the men's movement of the United Brethren church, the Baptist Brotherhood, the men's movement of the Disciples of Christ, the Brotherhood of the Southern Presbyterian church, the Congregational Brotherhood and others. Two years ago the combined membership of these various denominational organizations represented approximately 1,000,000 men, banded together for Christian service. Tent Evangel Meetings. The old tent evangel committee of New York will open the thirty-second season of tent evangel on June 18 at 4 and 8 P. M. on West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street, between Morningside and Amsterdam avenues. Among the noted speakers to be heard at the opening services will be Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers, pastor of Tremont temple, Boston. This is the ninth session of tent evangel under its present unit committee, of which Rev. G. W. McPherson is the superintendent and F. T. Hopkins the treasurer. During these nine seasons 120,000 persons have been gathered for religious instruction. Tent evangel is the original tent work in New York and the mother of the modern tent movements in America. All Right Without Assistance. It is probable that many queens of the kitchen share the sentiment good-naturedly expressed by a Scandinavian servant recently taken into the service of a young matron of Chicago. The youthful assumer of household cares was disposed to be a trifle patronizing. "Now, Lena," she asked earnestly, "are you a good cook?" "Y-as, 'm, I tank so," said the girl, with perfect nativity, "if you will not try to help me."

Green Gables Dr. BENJ. F. BAILEY. SANATORIUM Lincoln, Neb. This institution is the only one in the central west with separate buildings situated in their own ample grounds, yet entirely distinct and rendering it possible to classify cases. The one building being fitted for and devoted to the treatment of noncontagious and nonmental diseases, no others being admitted. The other Rest Cottage, being designed for and devoted to the exclusive treatment of select mental cases, requiring for a time watchful care and special nursing.
