MONEY INTERESTS AGAINST HIM

Says Prominent Men in Chicago Did Things Lorimer is Accused of Doing—Ex-Governor Yates Testifies.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—George W. Hinman, editor and publisher of the Chicago Inter Ocean, was the first witness today at the regular session of the senate committee to investigate the election of Senator Lorimer. The calling of Hinman was a surprise and was due, so Chairman Dillingham explained, to the desire of Mr. Hinman to keep a pressing engagement.

Former Governor Yates of Illinois, who arrived at the room just before Mr. Hinman was called, was seemingly disappointed because he was not called at once and made a request to be heard immediately. Ex-Senator Hopkins made a similar request. The chairman assured them that they would be heard today.

At an executive session of the committee it was decided to exclude witnesses not on the stand.

To Attorney Marble's questions Mr. Hinman said he was a close friend of Senator Lorimer, but had received no money to be used in his election.

The witness was questioned at length in regard to the "jackpot" funds of the Illinois legislature. Mr. Hinman said he had never talked with anyone who said he contributed to a "jackpot," operated one or received money from one.

"But I believe there has been a 'jackpot' in every legislature of Illinois since I went there twelve years ago," he added.

"What do you mean by a 'jackpot'?" asked Senator Fletcher.

"A corruption fund. I believe they call the fellows who handle it in New York where I came from—the 'black horse cavalry.'"

Reference to Whiskey Interest.

The attorney read editorials from the Inter Ocean, in which the suggestion was made that prominent persons in Chicago and in Peoria "might be shaken by an investigation into Illinois legislature jackpots."

"To whom did you refer?" Mr. Marble asked.

"I did not have any particular person in mind."

"Who did you refer to Peoria then?"

"The common report was that a considerable part of the jackpot came from a certain interest in Peoria."

"What interest?"

"The liquor interest."

"Did common report connect any other interests with a 'jackpot'?"

"Money interests against."

"Not that I recall," the witness said, adding that the money interests of Chicago had taken sides against Senator Lorimer.

"Do you mean to say that prominent persons of Chicago, who looked upon themselves as better than Senator Lorimer did the very things he is criticized for doing?" asked Senator Kern.

"That puts it better than I could express it."

The editor was asked if the packing house interests were opposed to Lorimer.

"I would not say that they were particularly friendly," was the reply.

He added that the head of the telephone companies seemed very much opposed to Lorimer. Mr. Hinman showed some heat when the committee asked him about his business relations with Funk, Hines, Tilden and Lorimer.

"I ceased speaking to Mr. Funk about three years ago because he was too malignant an enemy of Mr. Lorimer," explained Mr. Hinman.

The witness declined at first to answer if he had borrowed money from either Hines, Tilden or Lorimer, because it was a question concerning his private business.

"Oh, well, I will answer under protest," he said, after thinking it over. "On one occasion I borrowed $4,000 from Mr. Hines on three or four months' time."

"When?"

"Within the last eight or ten weeks."

Mildred Bridges is Cross-Examined

Girl Says She Went to See's Temple with the Consent of Father and Mother.

CHICAGO, June 22.—Mildred Bridges, the 17-year-old girl with whose abduction Evelyn Arthur See, founder of the Absolute Life cult, is charged, today testified that she had gone to live in See's so-called temple with the full consent of her father and mother. She was cross-examined by See's counsel.

She denied that See exercised any influence, hypnotic or otherwise, over her. Her father, she declared, had at one time been president of the "Absolute Life" society.

"If See were to die tonight, would you go on and fulfill the demands of absolute life?" she was asked.

"I would. I must fulfill the life that is within me. I went to See's flat because I wanted to live out my life."

Several times the girl flatly contradicted statements she had made yesterday.

Many could not gain admittance today, as it was believed the testimony would reveal the innermost secrets of the cult. No children of school age or unaccompanied women were admitted.

Mrs. Eddy's Will is Probated in Boston

State at Once Takes Appeal to Supreme Court on the Question of Domicile.

BOSTON, June 22.—The will of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder of the Christian Science church, was admitted to probate in the Suffolk county probate court today. Attorney General James M. Swift of Massachusetts immediately took an appeal to the supreme court on the question of domicile.

The carrying of the case to the supreme court brings the will alongside another proceeding relative to property left by Mrs. Eddy. Both actions involve substantially the same questions regarding domicile of the testatrix and it is the desire of the attorney general to have both cases tried at the same time.

At the probate hearing today no objections were made to the allowance of the will.

The action now pending in the supreme court involves the conveyance of two parcels of real estate from trustees of Mrs. Eddy's property to the directors of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, of this city. The statute prohibits bequests to churches to an amount yielding not more than $2,000 also is involved in this latter case.

Fifteen Million Pupils in Sunday Schools

General Secretary Lawrence Makes Report to International Convention.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 22.—There are now 1,496,500 Sunday school pupils in this country, according to the report of General Secretary Marlen Lawrence, read in the International Sunday School convention here today. This, said the secretary, means a gain of 1,481,000 pupils since the last convention three years ago. Since the last convention a Louisville conversions have been made at the rate of over 1,000 a day.

Secretary Lawrence thinks the schools are now ready for a "systematic ingathering" and recommends energies toward increasing the enrollment.

Man is Tarrred and Peppered by Mob

Michael Heilman of Trail, O., May Lose Sight as Result of Torture
by Masked Men.

WOOSTER, O., June 22.—Early last evening Michael Heilman, aged 35, single, was given a beating and was then tarred and peppered by a mob of masked men in the village of Trail, Holmes county. Heilman was found in a semi-conscious condition on the highway, having walked ten miles after the assault and is now in a critical condition from internal injuries at the home of his mother near Fredericksburg, Wayne county. Heilman was able to say that he was mobbed because he associated with a certain woman. Heilman may lose his sight because of pepper getting into his eyes.

DEAN PRESENTS THE MONARCH

Crown is Then Placed Upon His Head

cient Prayer.

LONDON, June 22.—"Long Live George V. king by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and for the British Dominion beyond the seas, defender of the faith, emperor of India."

Such is the official greeting and such the cry taken up today and echoed throughout the country and beyond the seas, as the coronation ceremonies in Westminster Abbey gives official sanction to the reign of the eighth member of the house of Hanover.

The central feature of the elaborate ceremonies is the coronation itself occurring toward noon today in Westminster Abbey.

The official greeting of the king and queen is first extended by the archbishop of Canterbury, who, addressing the assembled guests and through the in the people of England, says:

"Sirs, I here present unto you King George, the undoubted king of this realm; Wherefore all you who are come this day to do your homage and service, are you willing to do the same?"

The assent of the assembled multitude is given with "God Save the King," and this is taken up and echoed outside, while trumpets sound, announcing the official recognition and the putting on of the crown.

The archbishop also receives the oath of the king, solemnly promising to govern the people according to the statutes in parliament and the respective laws and customs of the same. As the archbishop places the crown upon the king's head, he intones:

"O God, the crown of the faithful; Bless we beseech Thee and sanctify this Thy servant, George our king; and as Thou dost this day set a crown of pure gold upon his head, so enrich his royal heart with Thine abundant grace and crown him with all princely virtues through the gift of eternal Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen."

Chair of St. Edward.

The king sits in the historic chair of St. Edward as the crown is placed upon his head. The dean of Westminster is the custodian of the crown and delivers it to the archbishop at the moment the king places it upon the head of the sovereign.

This done, the greeting of the assembled guests and the multitude outside is again given and re-echoed throughout the king's coronation is accompanied by similar ceremonies of impressive dignity.

The coronation ceremony combines many other features based on tradition and coming down through the ages, including the anointing, the investing with the armillars, the royal robe, the delivery of the orb, the presenting of the scepter, the homage, the intonation, the sermon, the communion, the prayer of consecration and the Te Deum Laudamus, combining the pomp and pageantry of feudal and medieval ages, with the glitter and outward show of the days of chivalry.

Accompanying the king and queen and sitting beside them throughout the impressive ceremony, are to be the duke of Connaught and the young prince of Wales, the latter wearing the uniform of a naval cadet. Carrying the canopy over the head of the king are to be four knights of the Garter, the earl of Crew and the earl of Minto. The canopy carried over the head of Queen Mary is borne by four duchesses, namely, the duchess of Hamilton, the duchess of Montrose, the duchess of Portland and the duchess of Sutherland. The king's magnificent robe made of the cloth of gold has a train borne by eight pages, namely, the marquess of Harrington, the earl of Arlisle, Viscount Cranbourne, the Lord Romilly and four others drawn from the ranks of the nobility.

Many of the foremost men of the kingdom figures also in the various ceremonies of the coronation. The duke of Northumberland is the bearer of St. Edward's crown. The earl of Beauchamp is the bearer of the sword of state, Earl Roberts is the bearer of the second sword and Viscount Kitchener the bearer of the third sword. The duke of Argyll bears the scepter with the cross. The bishop of Ripon carries the king's regalia, while the duke of Somerset, the duke of Richmond and others bear various other traditional emblems of the coronation.

Queen Mary's crown is borne by the duke of Devonshire.

WOOL BILL UP TO THE SENATE

Finance Committee Make Adverse Report on Measure.

MEANS LONG FIGHT ON FLOOR

Republicans Place Responsibility on Insurgents and Democrats—Number of Other Bills to Be Introduced.

WASHINGTON, June 22.—An already badly tangled situation in the senate was still further complicated today when the senate finance committee decided to throw the woolen revision and so-called farmers' free list bills, recently passed by the democratic house, into the open senate at once to take their chances along with Canadian reciprocity. Both measures, however, received formal adverse committee reports.

The committee refused to take responsibility for reporting in detail on these measures at any time and decided to cast the burden of senate legislation on the coalition of democrats and insurgent republicans suddenly brought about last night when the wool bill came from the house.

The finance committee had been instructed to report the wool bill by July 10. It was reported today that Senator Clapp proposed to offer a resolution on instruction as to the free list bill, but the committee forestalled such action.

"It has been demonstrated that the republicans no longer are in control of the senate and responsibility has been taken from them." This statement from Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, chairman of the once all-powerful committee on finance, today reflected the chaotic conditions in the senate as a result of last night's fight over the house wool bill which brought about a coalition of democrats and progressive republicans. By thirty-nine to eighteen this coalition instructed the finance committee to report the wool bill to the senate by July 10.

Chairman Penrose called a meeting of the finance committee for today with the avowed purpose of reporting the bill at once.

"It would require ten months properly to consider the wool schedule and grant requested hearings. The bill might just as well be reported today as on July 10," asserted Mr. Penrose.

Senators Cullom, Lodge and Clark of Wyoming, members of the committee, agreed with the chairman. The other members of the committee counseled delay. They declared that to act today would indicate petulance.

Interest in the senate situation centers largely about the fate of the Canadian reciprocity agreement.

PROCESSION IS IN THREE PARTS

First Comes Distinguished Guests and Escorts, Then the Prince of Wales and Lastly the King and Queen.

LONDON, June 22.—A grab sky and smog showers early this morning though they dimmed the freshness of the luscious decorations, could not dull the enthusiasm of the multitude who for months had been planning to make the 22d of June a red letter day in their lives.

Hundreds of thousands of Americans, Germans, Frenchmen and natives of all lands, from China to Peru, joined the hustling throng and yielded themselves up with magnificent enthusiasm to the coronation pageant.

The weather was about the only thing that had not been prearranged with exactness and it was the one thing likely to mar, or make supremely glorious, the day that was to give Britain a new king.

Fair weather had been promised and when John Bull looked from his window upon lead skies this morning he experienced a pang of disappointment, but this did not dampen his spirits to noticeable effect. Later his stolid optimism was rewarded, for as the royal coach bearing King George and Queen Mary to Westminster Abbey for their crowning, emerged from the yard at Buckingham palace, the clouds gave way and the sun burst through in all its glory, permitting what might have been a bedraggled procession to become a spectacle of splendor.

After the morning rush of enthusiasts, mainly of the humbler class and great numbers of ticket holders eager to secure places of vantage from which to witness the royal procession before the expected crowds arrived on the scene, there was some falling off observed and as late as 5 o'clock, when the front gates at Buckingham palace closed, there was little difficulty in moving freely at any point between the palace and Westminster Abbey.

Crowds Increase Rapidly.

Thereafter the crowds rapidly increased and by the time the troops began to take up their positions along the line of the processional route at 7:15 o'clock there were dense masses of spectators at every point. The pressure became so intense at Charing Cross and at White Hall that the police cordon was broken by the surging people. With the aid of the troops, however, the authorities soon regained control.

General Kitchener, who is in command of the troops and 12,000 police, hurried here and there and was everywhere cheered. It was a great day for Tommy Atkins. Sixty thousand of the empire's picked men lined the processional route as they swung along in their assigned places with a cock-sure stride that they won a cheer from every spectator who had a cheer in him.

Three Processions.

Entertained by the bands, the sight of the troops and the scurrying about of officials, the crowds were well engaged and before they realized it, the processions from Buckingham palace to Westminster Abbey were getting under way.

There were three processions, one for the royal guests, another for the Prince of Wales and members of the royal family other than the king and queen, and the imperial procession.

The first was made up of fourteen dress carriages, occupied by the royal guests and the distinguished court officials and officers attached to their staffs. The carriages were drawn by pairs of the famous bay horses from the royal stables, driven by royal coachmen and attended by footmen in scarlet liveries.

Trumpeters and an escort of the royal horse guards preceded the royal guests, few of whom were recognized by the crowds. The spectators, however, were

CORONATION FEATURES

King George V. crowned today with impressive ceremonies in Westminster Abbey, is the sixth ruler of the House of Hanover, son of the late King Edward VII and grandson of Queen Victoria. He is 45 years old this month.

The Archbishop of Canterbury administered the Coronation Oath, saying: "Will you solemnly promise and swear to govern the people of this United Kingdom and the Dominions thereunto according to the statutes in parliament agreed on, and the respective laws and customs of the same?"

The King: "I solemnly promise so to do."

The crown placed on King George's head today is of solid gold studded with precious stones of inestimable value, including 3,000 diamonds, 300 pearls and hundreds of rubies, emeralds and sapphires. The queen's crown contains the famous Koh-i-Noor diamond, with its legend of bringing good luck.

Over forty members of Royal Families, 250 rulers of foreign states, 1,450 earls, dukes, lords and ladies, 300 ambassadors and ministers; 1,500 representatives of the army, navy, judiciary, clergy, etc., formed part of the 7,000 guests at Westminster Abbey today.

America is represented at the coronation by the American ambassador, Whitelaw Reid, the American special envoy, John Hayes Hammond, many American wives of English peers, members of the American diplomatic corps and many unofficial Americans, including Charles P. Taft, brother of President Taft.

LONDON, June 22.—King George V, eighth of the house of Hanover, was today consecrated to the service of the British empire and in turn received the public homage of his world wide subjects.

With his consort, Queen Mary, his majesty was crowned in the abbey of Westminster with all the wealth and religious rites and ritual ceremonial prescribed by historical custom.

The picture within the gray walled abbey was one of medieval splendor. The coronation services, solemn and imposing, were those handed down from the earlier centuries and the actors in the principal and secondary roles of today's great function were garbed in reproductions of the medieval and embroidered trappings worn by their ancestors. The latter made a wonderfully effective setting around the central figures.

Outside the usually dull streets had been transformed into a mass of color. The king and queen, in their robes of state, returned to Buckingham Palace was one unbroken ovation. The route was hedged with a vast polyglot host with a background of decorated viewing stands and windows and roofs, all of which were crammed to their capacity.

Hundreds of thousands of spectators shouted themselves hoarse at central points like the Mall and the entrance to the admiralty, where the government stands held a score of thousands. Trafalgar square was so densely packed with humanity that it would not have been difficult to traverse the square walking on the heads of the people. Parliament square, club land and Constitution hill held their countless thousands.

The tumult of thunderous welcome was almost deafening as the king and queen passed on the outward and home journeys, preceded in the first instance and followed on the return by a stately, superb cavalcade of eminent persons, many themselves heirs to thrones, statesmen, diplomats, courtiers, soldiers, sailors and men of all hues, races and creeds from the four quarters of the globe.

The great ceremonial passed off unmarred by untoward incidents. When dawn broke the skies were heavy and showers fell during the progress of the processions of the royal guests and the junior members of the royal family to the abbey, but as the king and queen left Buckingham Palace to be crowned the heavens smiled and a flood of sunshine brightened the splendid pageant.

It was a proud day for the British empire, but of all its millions the one who perhaps had the most reason to be proud was denied by court etiquette the joy of witnessing the triumphant event. At Sandringham Palace Queen Mother Alexandra, who forty-six years ago this month gave Britain a king, awaited the news that her son
