COMPANY BLOCKS DOLLAR GAS

Secures a Temporary Injunction from Judge W. H. Munger.

HEARING IS SET FOR JULY 12

Gas Company Contends It Cannot Afford to Sell Consumers Gas at One Dollar Per Thousand Cubic Feet.

Citizens of Omaha are not to enjoy the privileges of dollar gas for some time to come. An order restraining the city from putting the dollar gas ordinance, recently passed, into effect, was granted by the Omaha Gas company Saturday morning by Judge W. H. Munger in the United States circuit court. The hearing for a temporary injunction has been set for 9:30 o'clock on the morning of July 12.
The papers were filed by the gas company Friday night after the ordinance had been signed by Mayor Dahman and the City of Omaha was made the defendant in the case. It is the contention of the gas company in its petition that dollar gas would not yield a sufficient revenue to pay stockholders interest on their investments and also that the ordinance is confiscatory. The ordinance was drawn and passed on the suggestion of Assistant City Attorney William C. Lambert, who claimed that the city had the right to regulate the rate of the company, irrespective of the fact that the gas company has a franchise which does not expire for seven years to come and in which the gas company agrees to furnish gas at the rate of $1.25 per thousand cubic feet, less 10 cents, if paid before the 10th of the month.
The gas company makes a second claim that the council has no right to regulate the gas rates, as the franchise is still in effect and a stipulated price for gas per 1,000 cubic feet is named in it, and it is considered no less than a contract with the city.
The Omaha Gas company about two weeks ago offered to sell gas to the city for lighting purposes for $1 per 1,000 cubic feet, which the city will accept.
Frank T. Hamilton, as president of the Omaha Gas company, has retained W. M. Hardman and Goussery, Parker & Miller as counsel for his company and the restraining order was issued after a bond for $5,000 had been filed. The various bookkeepers at the gas company have signed sworn affidavits as to the conditions of the company, and the papers have also been filed in the federal court.
An engineer by the name of Jansen Halnes of Des Moines, and known over the country as an expert in the gas business, made an investigation of the Omaha Gas company plant and has filed a long statement giving his reasons why the dollar gas would not prove profitable for the stockholders. He said:
"In my opinion the value of the property of the Omaha Gas company exceeds the sum of $4,855,366, without making a careful detailed inventory of the company's property and basing an appraisal of its value upon such inventory. I cannot give my opinion as to its exact value, but from my knowledge of property I am sure it exceeds the amount I named."

Not Sufficient Income.
"I know that a rate of $1 per thousand cubic feet of gas will not yield the gas company a net income, after deducting cost of manufacturing and distribution, repairs, taxes, imposts and making reasonable allowance for depreciation sufficient to provide interest and profit on the value of the property of the Omaha Gas company used and useful in the gas business in Omaha in excess of 3 per cent per annum upon such invested capital."
"I believe the limitation of consumption of gas per capita in Omaha has been practically reached, and that the amount of such consumption will be and cannot be materially increased by decreasing the rate per thousand cubic feet of gas sold from $1.15 to $1. It is my belief that the increase in consumption in gas per capita in Omaha, if any, will not result in any material decrease in the cost of manufacturing, in the cost of taxes, nor in the cost of depreciation, nor in any material increase in interest and profits to the Omaha Gas company."
"The increase in gas sales, if any, which may come to the Omaha Gas company, must be obtained from an increase in population and the growth and development of buildings on many streets and many parts of the city, which are not now supplied with gas, and which will require the expenditure of large sums of money for mains, services, meters and additions to the manufacturing plant from year to year."
"The Omaha Gas company cannot obtain funds wherewith to make the extensions mentioned, to its distribution system and manufacturing plant unless it can show to investors, desirous of investing their money in the gas business in Omaha, that such extensions to its distribution system and improvements to its manufacturing plant will pay a reasonable interest and profit on the money invested by them."
Mayor Dahman said Saturday morning that it was the opinion of the city attorney that the city would be able to defeat the gas company in the courts and that he was of the same opinion. "However," he said, "we will fight them from the word go and to the finish."
