DEATH RECORD

Mrs. Ed T. Linge. BENKELMAN, Neb., July 2.—(Special.)—Mrs. Ed T. Linge of Indian Creek precinct, this county, died in a hospital at St. Joseph, Mo., Friday morning. She was buried in a Catholic cemetery there Saturday. In the month of February Mrs. Linge sustained a longitudinal fracture of her right leg, below the knee, which failed to unite because of a particle of bone becoming wedged between the broken bones. Upon making this discovery she was conveyed to St. Joseph about May 15, where an incision was made, the disturbing piece of bone removed and the limb again set, which failed for some reason to reunite. Another operation was performed in which septic poisoning set in and last Tuesday the member was amputated, but the patient never recovered from the shock. She leaves a husband and five children.

Mrs. Philip Casey Spoils the Oasis

Lake Mills Woman Who Finds Thirty Crow in Barn Around Case of Beer Spoils It. LAKE MILLS, Ia., July 2.—(Special.)—Casey is her name, Mrs. Philip Casey, and she is a worthy successor of the late Carrie Nation. She is domiciled in the northwest part of town. On her premises she has a barn and several thirty individuals are housed there and were freezing their drinks in a big barrel that was sawed in two. The ice was nicely packed around the case of beer bottles when she got wind that something was wrong in the barn. She immediately went in that direction, believing that she was a complete master of her own premises, and didn't even want the assistance of the county sheriff or the town marshal. Several of the dry fellows were in the barn waiting for a strike at the cool beverage. She told them to immediately make a clearance, and while some of them protested she went to the "ice chest" and taking out the bottles began to break them in regular Carrie Nation fashion. They protested, she insisted and she not only made every mother's son clear out of there, but she didn't cease her onslaught until every bottle was broken.
