How to Train a Wife

"Wifing or husband remarked too often in the comparative terms of the world. It is quite good company, even if it isn't done often."

It's "wifing" when a trip to Paris and puts her feet down when ever she's in Europe is mentioned, because she has read a many magazine articles on what it costs to bring out a daughter.

Finally, it's "her wife would rather sit in the sun at a summer evening and wave dances about a still unpurchased little house in the country" than to spend it on a vacation in various show.

The Confirmed Citizen's wife had been talking about their "little house in the country" for three years. Now, who's right?

In six months we can actually buy our little house. I'm going to begin to choose it tomorrow," the Hopeful Housewife exclaimed nervously.

"Why not today?" the Confirmed Citizen rejoined. "You've got all the Sunday papers to look through."

At that moment the cheerful ding-dong of a neighbor's automobile interrupted the conversation.

"What's it?" asked and his new motor car, he announced from the parlor window. "He has two other men with him so I think they're come to ask you to take a ride."

"It's a beautiful car," commented the Confirmed Citizen, and hastened to greet his visitor.

"If he's back in a trifle while," he announced cavalierly to his wife as he seated his car friend for her visit.

"All right, dear," she agreed merrily. "Remember, we have dinner at 7 o'clock on Sunday."

The Confirmed Citizen gave her what the girls call a look of merry scorn.

"I'll be back in a trifle while," he said, and the impatient motor pulled stonily out of sight.

It was 6:30 when the Confirmed Citizen and his wife's welcome had had an hour to do with the Confirmed Citizen, brown and burned and dusty, returned to his home.

THE GAVE HER A LAUGH OF MERRY SCORES.

"The road is ruined," his wife gravely exclaimed.

"Never mind the road," his lord answered exuberantly. "I don't care for our dinner. I've had some sandwiches and beer, and the most glorious ride. Say, that's the greatest car you ever saw, and only $1,000. Good and all. As we're running."

Hey, I can run it already. Suffice to say, he is going to introduce me to a friend of his in the automobile business, and he says he thinks he can induce him to let me have a car just like Suffice for the time. Why, that's like finding it in the streets. There never was such a bargain. We've got the money, and why should we be foolish enough to put it into a house when an automobile is simply waiting outside the door. You can draw me a check for it right now, and we'll still have a nest egg in the bank."

"Yes," said the wife, with a smile of determination, showing the flushed Worcester of her face off the neck and body of the steel skeleton of a steamer trunk. "We must have a nest egg and the only way to do that is to build a little house in the country. If you insist on having a car, then, you do a kind that is always on the move, never knows down, and doesn't know anything like it's a need. If it's a regular car, it will cost you a communication ticket in your savings account. How much did your little automobile trip cost you anyway?"

Have Been Numerous "Fads" in Bread

"Early in the '90s there was might talk about a process of bread-making from underground wheat," says the Operative Miller. "It was introduced by one Avery of Monroe, and the same idea has now been reintroduced by F. D. Roosevelt."

Then came "Japanese-style wheat bread," the temperance and anti-temperance people, flour bread, and Graham bread. In 1881 Dr. Holley, a gourmand, was to the fore with a special bread for the digestion which he called "Almondine bread." This seems to have taken into immediate decadence.
