FAVOR NEW EXAMINER SYSTEM

Omaha Bankers Like Recommendation of Comptroller of Currency.

WORKS WELL IN LARGE CITIES

Caldwell Says that Some of the Recent Bank Failures Might Have Been Averted by the Use of This System.

The recommendation of Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of the currency, that several reserve cities, including Omaha, adopt the system of having a clearing house examiner, will be considered by the Omaha Clearing House association. It is not probable, however, that any action will be taken by the association before September, as the meetings, which at most any time of the year are irregular, in the summer are almost discontinued.

Letters sent out by the comptroller in which his recommendation of the clearing house examiner are stated specifically have not been received by Omaha bankers. Their coming is awaited with much interest.

V. B. Caldwell, vice president of the United States National bank, declares that he personally, and, so far as he knows, the bankers of Omaha, in general, would favor the adoption of the examiner system. He said:

"There is no doubt that it is a good thing and would have worked a world of good in the clearing house of the country had it been adopted in the affairs of the banks sooner. Chicago was the first to adopt the examiner system, and then Minneapolis and St. Paul followed. New York then took it up.

Would Prevent Failures. "It is safe to say that the Omaha failure in Chicago or the Carnegie Trust company smash in New York never would have happened had there been a clearing house examiner who would have kept the officers of the association in touch with the kind of bank that were being made by these banks.

"The duties of a clearing house examiner are similar to those of a national bank inspector, but with this advantage. His field is confined to one locality and in that way the financial institutions are in closer touch with the current affairs of the banks than they would be otherwise.

"This plan will be considered by the clearing house, but I do not think there will be anything decisive in the question before next fall. Of course, the examiner system works better in the large cities, or rather should say it is of more benefit, as there are more banks and they are further apart. But it should be an excellent proposition for a city like Omaha."

"I doubt if it will have any effect locally," was the comment of Charles T. Kountze, president of the Omaha Clearing House association, on Friday morning when he was shown the Washington dispatches to the effect that Comptroller of the Currency Lawrence O. Murray has asked bankers in thirty-two large cities to adopt the plan of having a clearing house examiner.

Asked if he expected the Omaha association to comply with the comptroller's request, Mr. Kountze was reticent. "I don't care to express an opinion," he said. "There can be no action of the sort taken except through an act of the association, and it is uncertain when there will be a meeting. We have no stated meeting time, but one called together by the managing committee."

E. J. BURKETT AND FAMILY FINISHING A LONG TOUR

Ex-Senator Journeys by Easy Stages from New York City to Home in Lincoln.

Ex-United States Senator E. J. Burkett, Mrs. Burkett and the three little Burkettts, in fact, the whole Burkett family—looking brown as berries, rolled into Omaha Friday morning in a big touring car, and went on, after a few hours' stop, to their home in Lincoln. The ex-senator looks hale and hearty, and says he had a great time on his cross-country ride, being particularly gratified at the tonic effect it has had on Mrs. Burkett, who had been convalescing from a severe attack of typhoid fever.

"I joined the family in New York two weeks ago Sunday," continued Mr. Burkett, "and we toured up through New England, as far as Bennington, Vt., and then back to Troy, N. Y. We left Troy a week ago last Friday, and kept straight on, with the exception of nearly two days in Chicago. It was a great trip, and we had only one puncture on the whole journey. Taking our stops out, we made better time than the ocean-to-ocean party, who were ahead and behind us. We encountered only one rain, and that was over in Iowa. We will be living in Lincoln from now on, if this automobile touring habit does not interfere too much."

WATER FOR DEAF INSTITUTE

State Officials Come to Omaha to Investigate the Conditions at the School.

Addison Wait, secretary of state, and Walter A. George, state treasurer, were in Omaha Friday morning on an investigation of conditions at the Institute for the Deaf. The city has prepared to make extensive improvements at the school, paying Forty-fifth street from Military avenue to the entrance, but the work has been held up awaiting the installation of a new water system. The deaf institute is now without adequate water service for fire protection, according to Assistant City Engineer Campen, and it is proposed by the state to install new mains. The water company will then be able to get water out there without any cost to itself. No further work can be done toward paving until the water pipes are laid.
