Head of Cult Claims He Can Cure Any Disease.

SAYS HE IS A HUMAN X-RAY

Asserts Ability to Smell Disease and Treats Great Number of Patients Every Day—Tories Have a New Sore.

BY PAUL LAMBERTH.

LONDON, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—The Orangemen of Liverpool are chafing under the resolution which they adopted at the termination of the home office inquiry into the sectarian parades in their city. They think it is not fair to limit their street processions to four in each year. They had been having twelve. The restriction has had a beneficial result, but recently a spirit of aggressiveness manifested itself in the Orange ranks, and several collisions have occurred. This danger to the public peace will now be increased, for at a meeting of Orangemen recently held at Everton it was decided to rescind the resolution which restricted the number of Orange parades.

Men who claim power to work wonders live at Madelon and fame has been thrust upon them by the proceedings at an inquest held into the death of a Mrs. Winn of Barming. Mrs. Winn, who died from heart failure, had consulted a so-called scientist named Grant, called as a witness, described himself as a human X-RAY. He had been practicing about nine months, he said, and could not exactly explain his treatment. He simply held his hand over a patient.

He went on to say: "I can cure any disease anyone has, to put before me. The scientific part is hidden to the public, but not to me."

"Do you get many patients?"

"About 100 a day, never less than fifty, and I have had as many as 300."

Further questions were asked, he never charged poor patients. His practice was for every disease, but blindness, consumption, and cancer were the diseases he particularly looked after. In consumption, if he took it at a certain state, he could cure and lung, and had cured seven distinct cases of total blindness.

"A juror: 'If you can grow a new lung, I should think you can grow a new heart.'"

"Witness: 'I can if it is necessary.'"

"You rely upon X-RAY more than anything else, do you not?"

"No," he said, "I have a power of smelling a disease directly the patient comes into my consulting room."

A verdict of "death from natural causes" was returned.

WASPS AS BANK DEPOSITORS.

A war on wasps is being waged by the school children of Marden. Over 1,500 queen wasps have been killed by the children, who are paid by the Marden Fruit Growers' association at the rate of one penny for each wasp. The wasps are accepted by the schoolmaster as deposits in the school bank, the value being placed in the credit of the child depositors.

In applying at Marlborough street police court for a reduction of bail in the case of a valet named John Goodfellow, committed for trial for wounding William Kent of Livonia street, A. R. M. Samuel said the accused was a man of good character and was, in fact, the only Englishman who accompanied Dr. Cook when the police proceeded to the district inspector had Andrew Lapsley and James Kelly before the bench, when they were cautioned that they must not annoy the "peelers" in this manner. Mr. Maxwell, solicitor for the defendants, suggested that the police, instead of squirming under the annoyance, should get the epithet removed from the coat of arms. The magistrate replied that it was highly reprehensible conduct to "caw" at the police.

Ransom Demanded for Dr. Richter

Greek Brigands on Mount Olympus Ask Big Sum of Money, Also Chains and Rings.

SALONICA, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—The Greek brigands who carried off Dr. Richter, the German archaeologist, into the recesses of Mount Olympus, on the borders of Thessaly, have sent a letter to a shepherd demanding $20,000 ransom, together with a souvenir of gold chains and rings for members of the band. In the event of non-compliance the brigands said that they will send back Dr. Richter's head.

It is asserted that the capture of Dr. Richter is to avenge Germany's support of Turkey against Greece. Mount Olympus is clearly visible from Salonica, where the naval military forces of Turkey are assembled in honor of the sultan.

LORD KITCHENER TAKES LAND

Planters of East Africa Gratified at Promise of English General.

MOMBASA, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—Planters already established in British East Africa and Uganda are gratified at the news that Lord Kitchener is taking up land at Muboroni, situated near the Uganda railway, and distant about 200 miles from Mombasa and thirty-eight miles from the Victoria Nyanza. Lord Kitchener has taken up the land for the purpose of the cultivation of Ceara rubber, and is expected to arrive in December next. The district around Muboroni is very fertile.

Czar of the Russian Empire Cannot Take Automobile Trip

BY GEORGE FRASER.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—The czar has developed a regular fad for photography and is rarely without his camera. It would be the greatest delight to his majesty to be able to go free and untrammelled on an automobile tour through the Russias, and bring back photographs of the places which struck his fancy; but he is told that it would mean certain death. Even when they remove to Livadia, in the distant Crimea, the royal family are proceeded and accompanied by a regular army of police agents and soldiers. Fortunately the czar is very fond of yachting, and he can enjoy this sport with more freedom. Every year the czar and zarina spend a portion of the summer afloat on their magnificent yacht, the Standart. Usually their voyages are limited to cruises in the Baltic, the Gulf of Finland and the Gulf of Bothnia. In August, 1909, they extended their tour, and visited England at the time of the Cowes regatta. The czar is a born sailor. He follows everything that occurs on board his yacht with the closest attention, and is fully qualified to take command himself. He knows every member of his crew by name, and all about them, and has again and again shown his interest in their well-being. His sailor-like qualities are well known to seafaring men.

Two members of the Russian imperial police—Messrs. Alexander Rozoff and Ivan Arvak—are now in the United States in search of the famous Romanoff pearl necklace, which was stolen from the czar's. It was an heirloom of the imperial family of the Romanoffs. The Russian police have taken up the affair most energetically, and special representations have been made to the criminal investigation department in London, which for any race of the world is the most expert thieves. Similar notices have been sent to all the European police offices. Traces of all the missing jewels were found in America and the Russian detectives were sent to work them out.

The czar in early youth suffered a good deal from ill-health, shyness, and nerves. His son seems to have inherited the shyness, though luckily, not the ill health. The czarina has been a constant invalid since her marriage, and her health was not improved by the difficulties and dangers of her married life and the repeated disappointments of her hopes for a son. Her visits to Livadia and to Hesse do not seem to have done her very much good and she is often too weak to take her walk with her husband. It is hoped that a prolonged stay in the czar in the Gulf of Finland and adjacent waters during the summer may effect some real improvement in her health.

French Pretensions and Offers Viewed with Suspicion by Government of Kaiser, Which Lets Its Position Be Known.

BY MALCOM CLARKE.

BERLIN, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—The Kaiser has now assumed a new role, namely that of "the sledge-hammer of German strength." The Kaiser continued that he was gratified to learn that in upholding peace, he, too, had been able to be of use to Hamburg and to German shipping. What the Hanseatic league had striven for had only been attained when behind trade and shipping stood the bulwark of the Kaiser's fleet. Since the resurrection of the German empire peace had been assured and, God willing, it would remain so.

No Pardon for Spies.

The emperor refused to entertain the suggestion that he should on the occasion of the British coronation exercise his prerogative of mercy in the case of the suspected officers, Messrs. Brandon and Trench, at present serving terms of fortress imprisonment in the German west coast. It is added that the proposal was put forward by a person who had concluded, and has since been more than once revived by the same organs. In every case it has met with violent protests from the Pan-Germanic journals, which probably have done something to prejudice consideration of the matter, if it had really been brought up in the Kaiser's government.

Germany Stands Pat on Morocco.

A semi-official communication pronounces the secret Franco-Spanish treaty of 1902 with regard to Morocco, published in a Paris paper, to have "merely historical interest." The compensatory port, which the parties proposed to lease to Germany, is described as "the last remnant of the Moroccan empire, which would hardly have been accepted."

Another paragraph, evidently inspired, contradicts the statement of a Vienna paper, that Russia had "taken a mediating step in order to bring about a detente on the Moroccan question." It says: "There is no doubt that whatever a mediating step, there is nothing to mediate between Berlin and Paris with regard to Morocco. Just as little does the present position of the Moorish question provide an occasion for recalling Russia's alliance obligations to France, and as a result of the treaty, which would be essentially identical in purport, and were accepted in both quarters with the same confidence in the loyalty and sincerity of the French government."

Kaiser at Rowing Races.

The Kaiser put in an appearance as usual at the regatta of the rowing clubs on the Upper Sprea. As the imperial steamer Alexandra came in sight cheers arose from the banks and from the stands erected near the landing place. The Kaiser was on deck with his young daughter at his side, who was evidently enjoying herself much with her five boy cousins—Prince George of Greece (who is in love with her), Prince Alexander of Greece and three sons of Princess Frederich Karl of Hesse. After the races the winners were received on board the Alexandra, and the princess presented the Kaiser's prize. The chief race was won by a Mayence club, as has been the case three years in succession.

Princess to Marry Minister.

It is not every day that a princess is engaged to a minister of the gospel, who is also a count, but the Princess Barbara is in the exception. She has announced her betrothal to Count Friedrich von Luettichau, pastor of the German embassy of Constantinople. The Kaiser has approved the match.

Steamship Combine Advances First and Second-Class Rates

LONDON, July 15.—The Transatlantic Steamship lines embraced in the Atlantic conference have decided to increase the rates for both east bound and west bound traffic by $2.50. The advance to take effect on Monday next. The steers rates will not be changed.

LYONS, July 15.—A number of the steamship companies involved in the recent shipping strike today decided to advance the passenger rates to the United States and Canada by $1.25 to $2.50 in order to offset the increase in wages, which they were obliged to grant the strikers. It is possible that there will be some increase in freight rates.

Through the kindness of Joe Munchhoff, manager of Courtland Beach, the newsboys will not have to go to Elmwood park for their picnic, but will be given free use of all the concessions at the Beach. The picnic will be held July 25.

BULGAR DEPUTIES HOOT KING

Protest Raised Against His Presence at the Opening of National Assembly.

TIRNOVA, Bulgaria, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—At the opening of the Grand National Assembly, the Bulgarian national assembly, a deputy protested in the name of the extreme left party against the entry of King Ferdinand into the chamber. He declared that his majesty had no right to open the assembly. His protest was accompanied by hooting and cries of "Down with the King" and "Hurrah for the Republic" from his supporters. The majority of the members replying with cheers for the king and the monarchy.

EELS KEPT WHERE NEEDED BY A BARRIER OF LIGHT

Danish Government Aids Fishermen of the Baltic by Using Electric Lights Under Water.

COPENHAGEN, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—The Danish government, under the direction of its biological station at Copenhagen, has begun an interesting effort to aid the fishermen of the Baltic by preventing the migration of eels from that sea into the ocean. The means employed is a barrier of light, formed by placing fifty electric lamps along a submerged cable between the island of Fano and the coast of Funen. The effectiveness of such a barrier depends upon the fact that the eels migrate only during the dark hours. Accordingly as soon as darkness begins in the season of migration the lamps are illuminated and thus a wall of light is imposed from which the eels recoil. A similar principle is said to have been employed from time immemorial by fishermen on certain parts of the coast of Italy.

British Authority in India Is Diplomatically Defied

CALCUTTA, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—The assessors in the Dacca conspiracy trial have delivered their verdict. They found all the accused not guilty. The government evidence was described as not being reliable and the police spies worthless and incredible. The assessors said that the Samiti organization meant to relieve helpless sufferers and promote physical culture.

The trial opened at Dacca on August 15 last. The prisoners, who numbered forty-two, were charged with conspiring to wage war against the king. At the beginning of the proceedings the Dacca police received a parcel containing a human skull, with written warnings that a high officer would shortly visit Dacca.

On the night of September 1, Police Inspector Ghosh, an important witness in the trial, was shot by two youths in a dark lane near Dacca church. His assailants were tried in December, and the jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

The assessor's verdict is still in effect. The judge is not bound to pronounce judgment. The judge is not bound to accept the verdict of the two Bengal assessors, who, according to law, are associated with the judge to help him with their knowledge of local social conditions and Hindu habits. In recent political cases the judges have hardly ever accepted the verdict of the assessors.

R. W. Ashe, collector at Tinnevely, has been shot dead by a Brahmin vakti, or attorney. Mr. Ashe had arrived at Mant-yachi junction with his wife. Both were sitting in the train when the Brahmin approached and shot Mr. Ashe in the chest with a revolver. He then committed suicide.

Mr. Ashe was deputed to conduct the trial of the Tuticorin rioters last year, and it is surmised that the assassin had a grudge against him.

BELOVED QUEEN OF BELGIANS RECOVERS HEALTH SLOWLY

BRUSSELS, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—Queen Elizabeth, the idol of the Belgian people and the fond mother of three most interesting children, is not yet quite restored to health. Her arduous charity work, combined with the social excursions of her position after she became queen through on last winter a violent attack of typhoid fever, which left her in an enfeebled condition. Her lungs and throat were so affected that as soon as she was able to be taken to Riviera. Not being much benefited there, she sought the still milder climate of Egypt. Now that she is at home again she is still too delicate to undergo an operation which ought to be performed for an ear trouble. It was her custom to drive out daily with her children. He hopes her return she has not been permitted to do this.

PRINCESS MARY BRIGHT GIRL

Only Daughter of British Ruler is Fond of Sports.

HAS NEVER CARED FOR DOLLS

Royal Company of Archers, King's Scotch Bodyguard, an Exclusive Organization—Woman Head of a Clan.

BY LADY MARY MANWARING.

LONDON, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—All the girls in the empire feel intensely interested, as is only natural, in Queen Mary's one little daughter, Princess Victoria Alexandra Alice Mary, playfully called "the little jubilee princess," the date of her birth being April, 1897. She is only known by her last name and is always spoken of as Princess Mary simply, being now 14, and as full of fresh, natural enthusiasm and as fond of sports as her brothers, to whom she is devoted. She has never cared at all for dolls and does not even possess such a thing as a doll's house, but this is often the case with an only girl, who naturally shares her brothers' interests.

The little princess once asked her mother the question, "Mother, what do you do without toys?" And the queen's reply was "Children are the favorite toys of their parents," an answer which sums up the situation very neatly, if for the word "toys" we substitute that of "occupation," since Queen Mary's whole attitude towards her family partakes of that conscientious and serious character which marks every one of her actions, whether in public or private.

The appointment of the duke of Roxburgh to succeed Sir David Dundas as one of the brigadiers of the Royal Company of Archers recalls the fact that the semi-military force is one of the most exclusive in Scotland, almost as exclusive as the Knights of the Thistle, the members forming the elite of Scottish society. They are the King's bodyguard for Scotland, their formation dating back to 1678. In their quaint uniform of Lincoln green, and with bows and arrows, they will present an imposing sight on the approaching visit of the king to Edinburgh, when they will have to present him with the customary "reddendo" of three barbed arrows.

The king will inspect his bodyguard and present them with new colors. The captain-general is the duke of Buccleuch, the earl of Elgin and Aberdeen are lieutenants, the marquis of Tweeddale and the duke of Breadalbane and the earl of Mar are among the brigadiers, so that his majesty will be met and nobly protected when he visits the metropolis of Scotland.

The Clan Menzies is one of the oldest in Scotland, and for long its chief conformed to the Gaelic mode of ruling his retainers rather by patriarchal influence than upon feudal principles. The late chief was Sir James Menzies, bart., who died not long ago, and as he was the last of his race on the male side the honor of chieftainship comes to be possessed by the only survivor of the family, Miss Edith Charlotte Menzies, sister of the late chief. In the Gaelic the chief is styled "Menaich," it remains to be seen what the title of the head of the clan will be. Unlike Helen Macgregor, she will be able to walk abroad without the necessity of wearing the claymore of her sters, which rests in Castle Menzies.

Lord Rosebery's complaint that the Englishman's house is no longer his castle reminds one of an amazing incident that happened within my personal knowledge only a few days ago.

A lady, on her at-home day, was suddenly consoled by two male callers, one of whom was to be a ballfist. They insisted on entering, and declared that her husband, a professional man, owed a large sum of money on photographic apparatus.

The lady telephoned to her husband, who at some inconvenience had to search out the collectors, and it was several hours before the ballfists were withdrawn. It seems that the collectors had simply looked out the name of the debtor in a directory and had dispatched the ballfist under an order of the court, without the slightest attempt at verification.

The person who owed for the apparatus was somebody quite different, yet it is exceedingly difficult to see what compensation can be found for the great shock and humiliation thus wantonly inflicted on a lady absolutely innocent.

SCARCITY OF SERVANTS ALARMS

United States Agents Keeping a Close Watch on Rich Americans in France—Reverent Man Shoots Surgeon.

BY PAUL VILLIERS.

PARIS, July 15.—(Special to The Bee.)—The fashionable beauties now surround themselves with the ugliest servants possible. Their constant companions are hideous pets. One celebrated beauty has engaged a dwarf who is described as having a tremendous head, a malevolent expression and hardly any legs, and the lady takes him out walking with her in order that his ugliness will emphasize her beauty. Other beauties are selecting equally unattractive foals and the fashion is said to be spreading just as rapidly as ugly servants and pets can be found.

Uses Knife on Girls

To contend that certain crimes happen in cycles is no midsummer dream. This city demonstrates this idea probably more so than any other big city. For months policemen will be victims of the criminal element. Now it is women.

The Metropolitan railway has become the scene of dangerous assaults committed by a man who is evidently a monomaniac. A girl of 19 years got into the train and on her arrival at the Etolle station was alighted when she found a young woman who had gone with the same object, as she had been stabbed in the side, fortunately with only slight effect. In each case the same individual was to blame, as the two descriptions of the monomaniac tallied. There are but a few of the victims. Doubtless patrols of police have been placed at danger points and plain clothes men are on the lookout.

Fewer Female Servants.

It is expected that the census will show a great falling off in the number of servants, and especially in that of bonnes a tout faire. I give the name they go by because, though they are employed as general servants, they have little in common with the British maid of all work. The bonne is invariably of rustic origin. But one wonders at the speed with which she assimilates what is Parisian and what this city requires of her.

Watching Rich Shoppers.

United States treasury agents are a busy lot in Paris right now. Wealthy Americans who came over for the English coronation are being watched by the force of detectives representing the American government. It is reported here that the large purchases of pearls that have been made within the last few days have been duly noted, and a full description of the purchases sent over to Collector Loeb. The Precious Stones Importers' Association of America, which is working in conjunction with the government, is determined that none of these pearls or any other gems shall be smuggled through without the duty being paid.

Surgeon Shot Down.

The Hotel Dieu, the great hospital of Paris, was the scene of a terrible crime. Dr. Guinard, the chief surgeon, had just visited his patients and had descended to the hall door. On reaching the door the professor was detained by a nurse in connection with one of the cases, when a man fired four shots at him. All the bullets took effect, and the professor sank back terribly injured. Dr. Guinard was carried back into the hospital. The man is a Spaniard named Canadillo Herrera, who a year ago was received into the hospital, where the chief surgeon performed a serious operation on him. Herrera seems to have been convinced that the operation was not necessary, and he was heard to declare on more than one occasion that the doctor had put him through a needless operation. "The doctor," he said, "carved me in a horrible way, and I have more than once tried to kill him." The man seems to be insane or in such a highly nervous condition as not to be responsible for his actions.

Suing for Lost Opportunity.

M. Loucheur is suing the Metropolitan Railway company for damages because the first morning train was two minutes late, and caused him to miss the 2:30 a. m. mail to Fontainebleau, which would have enabled him to paint the sunrise.

Heretic Physician's Last Letter.

Dr. Menny, the French physician, died at his post recently in the plague hospital at Manchuria. One of our newspapers published his last letter to his wife, from which we take the following: "When you receive this letter I shall be no more and shall have come to rest for thee. I was seized at 7 o'clock in the morning, but I kept at my duties until the afternoon. My little daughter, you were right; papa is going to die. Think of me. Love me, as I love you, Minette, adored one, dear children, friends, as ever. I shall meet you. It is useless for you to come out here to visit my grave. You might take the malady also, and the children would be left alone. My Minette, do not come. Embrace the little ones for me, and adored one pray for me."

Fast Passenger Train Strikes Switch Engine

ROCHESTER, N. Y. July 15.—West bound passenger train No. 5 on the Erie, running from New York to Buffalo, ran at full speed into a switch engine one-half mile east of the high bridge at Portage today, derailing the train and totally wrecking the express car. Engineer L. Oliver of the passenger was killed and his seven passengers were injured, none of them seriously.

Train No. 5 was late and was running fast. The switch engine was supposed to be on a siding, but was ten feet on the main track, it is alleged. Neither the engineer nor fireman of the switch engine were aboard at the time of the collision.
