Ingenious Mechanical Devices Obviate Much Mental Effort. SUBSTITUTES FOR BRAIN WORKER

It is an axiom of social evolutionists that in the not far distant future nearly all merely muscular industry will be superseded by machinery.

These limits, though they are very real, are not always very obvious, and to the casual observer it must sometimes appear that a kind of mechanical intelligence is being evolved.

Some of the touches of what, for convenience, we may call mechanical intelligence, to be met with in various odd corners of the industrial and commercial world are really quite amusing.

The screw-making machine. There is, for instance, to be seen in any screw factory a different application of that device.

It is of no use trying to print a bad ticket. The machine finds out an imperfect blank in an instant and flatly refuses to have anything to do with it.

Higher flights of intelligence. However, there are far higher flights of mechanical intelligence than this.

The work of hundreds and thousands of clerks has within the last few years been taken over by small machines very much like typewriters in appearance.

Mechanical Calculators. The clerical staffs of many of the big insurance companies have of late years been considerably reduced.
