

TOPICS FOR A DAY OF REST

Former Pastor of Polish Church Returns to His Flock.

TAKES HIS OLD PULPIT TODAY

Many Ministers Are Out of the City, but Services Will Be Held in Most of the Churches Sunday Morning.

Rev. Theobald Kalama, O. F. M., former pastor of St. Stanislaus Polish Catholic church, the largest in Cleveland, O., has returned to Omaha to be pastor of the Immaculation church on Twenty-fourth and Bancroft streets, which he erected fifteen years ago and was pastor of for seven years. He then was transferred to Columbia, Neb., from there to Cleveland, O., where he stayed five years and three months, and there built a school for $100,000 and rebuilt the church, which was demolished by a cyclone two years ago and cost $45,000 to remodel. After five years of hard labor he resigned to take charge of a smaller parish in order to have more rest, and perhaps in a short time will build a large brick church for a fast growing congregation. The present church may be remodeled for a school. The Polish people of Omaha and South Omaha are overjoyed to again have him as pastor. He it was through him that the parish was first organized and the first service held in South Omaha on Thirty-second and K streets, St. Frances church. He takes charge of the parish Sunday, July 23.

Prof. Harrison A. Trester of Allegheny college will preach at the North Presbyterian church Sunday morning.

INGRATITUDE OF A BACHELOR

Takes Everything that Comes His Way and Fails to Reciprocate.

Are bachelors ungrateful? Do they make it a constant policy to receive and never to give?

"I'm sick of bachelor men—they are no better than sponges," said a well known hostess.

"The trouble is," she continued, "one cannot give a party without them. A certain number of 'swallow-tails' are as necessary to the success of a dinner as a dinner is to the success of a party."

The average young man adds little to the general amusement of the room he enters. He has an air of not wanting to be there, and his hostess regards him merely as a necessary bit of the furnishing of her room.

"If it were not for this fact there are not more than three or four men for whom I really care who would ever get even a cup of tea in my house."

"The others—well, they are invited simply for appearance sake. Most of them are stupid; most of them vain, and all desperately keen upon chaperoning themselves from my own and other people's daughters, who, in all probability have absolutely no designs upon their bachelorhood."

"The average young man adds little to the general amusement of the room he enters. He has an air of not wanting to be there, and his hostess regards him merely as a necessary bit of the furnishing of her room. Unless she be blind and deaf, he gives away to her whenever he comes the fact that he considers his presence there quite sufficient return for her hospitality."

"He eats lunch and lunch at her house and does not even bring her a bunch of violets in return. He doesn't want to marry one of her daughters, won't even bother to get a rather important introduction for one of her sons and resorts being occasionally asked at the last moment as a 'fill-up.'"

"So what manner of use is he? As I said before, he is simply furniture. Just as a suite is not perfect without a certain number of chairs, a social gathering is incomplete without a sprinkling of black coats."

"I know a woman whose methods of dealing with such persons are somewhat drastic. I couldn't do such things myself, but I am not sorry that there is some one who can."

"When she has lavished endless hospitality upon a young man, and realizes that, though he has the means he has not the intention of making any return, she invites him to a little dinner at a hotel, say, with herself and a couple of daughters."

"When after dinner, the last daughter has been disposed of in the lounge, the woman suddenly gives a little scream of amazement at the lateness of the hour, and followed by her girls, she makes a dash for the cloak room, leaving the young man to pay for else she commissions him to buy the flowers for her party, or a box for the children at the pantomime, and then pretends to be engaged and hurried and 'leaves' him in a 'charming present.'"

"Does he ever speak to you again?" I asked, when she had explained her tactics to me.

"Oh, yes! I believe he thinks all the more of me forever after. He acknowledges to himself the fact that I am only insisting upon my rights, and he respects me for my attitude."

"I once heard a young man say to another: 'I have to give old Skinfint a dinner now and again or he doesn't ask me to his place to shoot. But the Givells are not the "cutlet-for-cutlet" sort, so I don't bother to entertain them.' And that, I believe, is the point of view of the average bachelor man."

THE BOTTOM DROPPING OUT

Sections of Cemeteries Threatened to Tumble Into Abandoned Coal Mines.

Turn open by a violent subsidence of the surface over old mine workings, the graves of some 800 dead at St. Vincent de Paul and the Polish Catholic cemeteries at 1750 Madison, Pa., are badly damaged.

Headstones are broken and shaken down, plot fences wrecked, the coffins and graves torn asunder and some of the graves exposed as much as seven or eight feet below the surface. The cause in occurred over old workings of the Gaylord mine of the Kingston Coal company, at a point where the pillars of coal supporting the surface have been weakened by coal being taken away.

Belatives of the dead flocked to the cemeteries by the hundreds and did what they could to restore some order out of the confusion. As for any redress, they are helpless. The coal company owns the mineral rights, and the congregations the surface rights only.

An effort some time ago to secure an injunction to prevent mining under the cemeteries failed and the only thing the owners of the plots and graves can do is to fill them in, replace the coffins and try to restore them. Meanwhile the cracks and fissures are growing wider.

Guards have been placed to protect the open graves.—Philadelphia Press.

FOOT POWER PLUCKS FORTUNE

Mining Stock Price in Sprinting Match Brings the Winner $70,000.

That it pays to be a good sprinter, even for one of the fair sex, was proven the other day when Miss Caroline Canton, a Chicago girl, learned that a little foot race she won three years ago from five girls in Calgary, Alberta, has been the means of making her the owner of mining stock valued at $70,000.

Miss Canton when in college devoted more time to athletics than to studies. Before graduating from Vassar she had become the fastest runner in college.

The year after leaving school she went to Calgary, the capital of Alberta, to visit some of her college chums. The provincial fair was being held at that time and one of the big events was a half mile run for girls.

Miss Canton and two of her school girl chums entered the race against three other Calgary girls.

Just before the race was called a young Calgary millionaire dealer stepped forward and said he would give a prize of a diamond bracelet to the winner. Before the girls' screams of delight had subsided another young Calgary millionaire mine owner declared he would add another prize to the winner, a certificate of 1,000 shares of stock in a British Columbia mining company.

When the outburst of yells, catcalls and laughter had subsided it was explained to Miss Canton that the mine was looked upon as worthless and had never paid any dividends, although at one time considered a winner.

She had met her friends' laughs at the mining stock with the statement that it was at least a pretty bit of paper and she would keep it for a souvenir.

Miss Canton has learned that the mine has been taken over by new management and been made the best paying property in western Canada. Stock is selling at $70 a share. Miss Canton's 1,000 shares are worth just $70,000, with prospects of it reaching $100,000 soon.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Not So Brave

"Well, Binksey," said Jiggers, genially, "did you celebrate the Fourth in fitting manner?"

"You bet I did," said Binksey, with a swelling chest.

"What did you do?" asked Jiggers.

"I read the Declaration of Independence to my mother-in-law," said Binksey.

"Fishes," whistled Jiggers. "You are a brave man, aren't you?"

"Oh, not so very," said Binksey. "I did it over the long-distance wire."—Harper's Weekly.

NO MAN IS STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH

A strong man is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from weak stomach with its consequences, indigestion, or from some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs, which impairs digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is weak or diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man doesn't feel just right, when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous, irritable and despondent, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man should use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, invigorates the liver, strengthens the kidneys, nourishes the nerves, and so GIVES HEALTH AND STRENGTH TO THE WHOLE BODY.

You can't afford to accept a corrupt nostrum as a substitute for this non-alcoholic medicine of known composition, not even though the urgent dealer may thereby make a little bigger profit. Ingredients printed on wrapper.
