

NEW RATES MAY HELP OMAHA

C. E. Spens Says Local Jobbing Interests May Be Benefited by Change.

RICH SAYS RAILROADS WILL LOSE

Railroad Men Are Not Certain as to Just What Effect the New Rating of the Commission Will Be.

Omaha freight traffic men and railroad attorneys of the city hold a wide divergence of opinions concerning the success of the new plan as announced by the Interstate Commerce commission.

The new schedule of tariff based on the division of the country into five zones will benefit many towns in the intermediate territory, but it will in the same proportion injure other firms of other cities of the Pacific coast and of the west.

Freight rates have in the past been built up as the jobbing interest of the large cities and the needs of territories have dictated.

The new division will hurt San Francisco's trade, as Reno will be able to get goods on the direct rate charge.

Conrad E. Spens, general freight agent of the Burlington lines west of the Missouri, declared that the going away with the "back haul" and the revision of the rates of "long and short" haul tariffs would mean the loss of money to the railroads of the west, as it would mean reduced rates to many intermediate points.

None of the Omaha freight men was able to state or even guess what division of the five zones of freight rates Omaha would come under the new ruling, except that it would undoubtedly be in the first or second division.

HOTEL COMMISSIONER ORGANIZES DEPARTMENT

McPadden Visits Omaha to Get Some Ideas as to the Enforcement of the New Laws.

R. D. McPadden of Hastings, state hotel commissioner, in whose hands rests the enforcement of the new hotel inspection laws, was in Omaha Monday.

It is the purpose of Commissioner McPadden to get in touch with hotel men throughout the state and get their ideas as to the provisions and general application of the state's latest hotel regulations.
