Group of Eager and Enthusiastic Young Scientists

A group of budding scientists has sprung up out on Farnam street—twenty small girls from 9 to 14 years of age who for the last two summers have scoured the country prairie trying to get the secrets of nature. Each Wednesday and Saturday since school closed these young scientists have made trips to the different parks and wooded places in and around Omaha to learn about the trees and birds and flowers. They estimate the temperature and wind velocity and they verify their results by telephoning to the official weather man. In all they have identified sixty-one weeds, twenty-one trees and twenty-two birds. On one of their trips to Florence the naturalists investigated a sand pile and found six kinds of pebbles. On another jaunt to the same place they studied the limestone fossils on the rip-rap. At Miller park they studied trees; at Riverview park and at Elmwood wild flowers. One Saturday they went to the home of Dr. J. C. Whitney and he showed them his collection of 80 birds. Saturday, July 29, they took their last trip. They went to Elmwood and made blue prints of wild flowers. Just as soon as the little woodswomen arrive at their destination they whip out their magnifying glasses and notebooks and settle down to work—delightful work which is not at all like school. At noon they have their lunch, picnic fashion and after lunch they sit around under the trees while Miss Wood tells them stories. The afternoon story telling is the one deviation from scientific fact, for the stories which Miss Wood tells are nature myths. One day she told them why the nest of the mourning dove is so much more carefully built than that of other birds; telling them that the dove would not wait to listen when the birds received instruction on nest-making and so never learned how, and has such an unsubsantial nest that the eggs can be seen through the twigs. Miss Wood aims to develop in her pupils the powers of observation and sees no reason why girls should not have as scientific minds as boys. She tries to enable them to find out the "whys" of things. She is a confirmed nature lover herself, having studied the outdoors for many years. She received her academic training at Per Normal school and Nebraska university. She will spend the remainder of the summer giving lectures in geography at the farmers' institutes throughout the state. Mrs. C. W. Astell originated the idea of the nature study class and started it among the girls who live in the neighborhood of before joining his regiment, the Eleventh Infantry, at Fort Russell. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dreyfoos have been entertaining at their guests Mr. and Mrs. Victor Abrams of Cincinnati, returning from a trip through the Yellowstone and the Enal Brith meeting at Denver, of which Mr. Abrams is the district secretary for his district. Mr. Charles Kountze and Mr. Ward Burgess left Friday for Chicago, where they will be joined by Mrs. Kountze, who comes down from Mackinac for the week, and in September Mr. and Mrs. Kountze and Mr. and Mrs. Burgess will motor through New England together. Mrs. N. Giendinning and Mrs. Albert Younglet of Manila, P. I., are the guests of their daughter and sister, Mrs. Clarence H. Farnham of Fort Crook. They arrived Tuesday and will remain until the early part of August, when with Lieutenant and Mrs. Farnham, they will leave for New York and the east. Lieutenant Farnham will spend much of his time at Camp Perry.

their guests Mrs. Carpenter's two sisters, Mrs. Steffins of Lincoln and Mrs. W. W. Bolt, and Rev. Bolt of Wichita, Kan. Mrs. Ella Mae Bryer will leave next Saturday for the Keelie ranch at Gillette, Wyo., and from there Mrs. Arthur Keelie and Miss Brown will take a western trip. Mr. and Mrs. D. Mr. Herbert Gunner leaves today for Kansas City to join his sister, Mrs. Fred Sanda, and party for a motor trip to the Sanda's summer cottage in the Ozark mountains. Mrs. W. L. Mahon of Detroit is making a brief visit here with her sister, Miss Mary Lennon, and her aunt, Mrs. J. Dermody. The latter will accompany Mrs. Mahon to the Pacific coast. "Sorry Because They Didn't Learn"

Parents often have regrets because they did not give their children an opportunity to learn to play a piano. "We felt we could not stand the expense of a piano," is the reason, "and so we let them go without the training." Most pathetic, is it not? But today parents cannot make this a valid excuse. The family of most modest income can afford to give their children a musical education. Hospe has solved the way. He provides a beginners' piano absolutely free. The only charges are made for a new piano which you agree to buy after the youngsters are through thumping and roughing the first instrument. The payments are as low as rental charges and never become a burden. Hospe makes the piano purchase a joy.

Hospe also rents pianos, with scarf and stool, for $3.00 a month.
