The new Wellington, built at a cost of over $1,000,000, is modern in every particular. The entire interior construction of steel girders carried on iron columns, there being no supporting partitions whatever. The building is semi-fireproof in its construction, all floors being laid in concrete and asbestos plaster board, wire lath and metal studding being used. All floors and halls are of tile, the entrance and first stairway of white marble. A circulating system of hot water supplies every room in the hotel. The building is equipped with the automatic sprinkler system. The entire rear of the building on the alley will be provided with a magnificent stair fire escape.
