Views the Different Irrigation Enterprises Now Under Way in Western Nebraska and Wyoming.

Having covered a large portion of the irrigated area of Wyoming, where he went accompaning Walter L. Fisher, secretary of the interior; Frederick H. Newell, direc tor of the reclamation service of the United States; P. S. Eustis, general passenger traffic manager, and L. W. Wakeley, general passenger agent of the Burlington, D. Clem Deaver of the road's land department, has returned. Speaking of the trip

Mr. Deaver says: Secretary Fisher was delighted with everything he saw in connection with the irrigation projects and will probably recommend extension in both Nebraska and

"Leaving Omaha we traveled to the North Platte valley and after getting into the Scott's Bluff country took automobiles and went sixty to seventy miles into Wyoming, going along the ditches and through the fields of grain. The secretary talked with a large number of the farmers, ascertaining just what they have been doing. In all instances we found excellent crops of all kinds.

"At Mitchell a large meeting was held, where with the farmers and land owners the discussion of the construction of the high line ditch, the Laramie canal and everal other matters in connection with irrigation were brought up.

More Projects Planned. the event the two projects are put through it will meen the irrigation of several hundred thousand acres of land in Nebraska and Wyoming that will be brought under irrigation. While the secretary would not make any promises, the indications seemed to be that he favored the project. Should the project be recommended there is enough money available to make a good start, as the army board has set aside $4,300,000 to be used for this

"A run was made to the Crow Indian agency, where a stop was made. There an Indian brought in a large box of vegetables and flowers of his own raising, presenting them to the secretary.

"On the Huntley project, where a few years ago 467 farmers filed under the provisions of the irrigation laws, each of them taking forty acres, we found that all but eight had compiled with the required conditions. Of these eight the secretary extended the time of four and cancelled the entries of the others.

Fisher Meets Settlers "At Powell the secretary held an euthusiastic meeting with the settlers and water users in that vicinity. There the settlers urged that the annual payments for the first five years after entry be made lighter and extra amounts be added to the payments of the last five years, contending that entrymen for the first few years after going upon their lands were not as well able to pay as after they got their land under cultivation. It was evident that the secretary took this view of the situation and may make a recommendation to this effect. "At Cody, Wyo., a committee of citizens took the secretary and party in automobiles and drove over the area of the Oregon basin project. For this work the army board has appropriated $2,000,000, which can be used as the preliminaries are out of the way. It is figured that this sum, together with the amount that will be realized from the sale of land, will complete the canals and the reservoirs."
