Ia., agreed to marry her, but lack of funds almost prevented the marriage. Shoe-maker, in custody of a policeman and accompanied by the girl, went to "Cupid" Furay, marriage license clerk, for a license

Thursday morning. When he came to pay for the license he found he had but $1. The price is $2. The bride had 15 cents, which she not very cheerfully contributed. The policeman said he would help to the extent of his ability and added 75 cents, all the money he had with him. "Cupid" wasn't going to lose a chance to issue a license when the only obstacle was the lack of a dime. He contributed this and delivered the license. The pair was married by Po-
