STRONG APPEAL IN FARM CRY

Many Listen to Call and Are Moved to Go Away.

CHANCE FOR PICTURE SOLVERS

Excellent Fruit Land in Famous Section of California, Valued at $1,200 Will Go on Second Prize.

The cry, "back to the farm," has been heard recently from many sources. The newspapers and magazines have taken up the cry; it has been sent out in all directions from the pulp and platform, but it must be more than a mere cry—it involves the solution of a great sociological problem, and the happiness and the prosperity of multitudes of people.

Where Land Lies. Tehama county, California, where is located the second grand prize in the Book-lovers' contest of The Bee, lies squarely across the head of the Sacramento valley. Its surface is diversified and includes the crest of both mountain ranges, with attractive foothills and much of the broad and level plain of the Sacramento valley.

Along the line of the Missouri Pacific there were heavy rains all the way between Plattsmouth and St. Joseph, it at many places aggregating fully an inch.

Along the line of the Union Pacific the rain came as far east as Columbus, where there were three-fourths of an inch. From there to Kimball, almost to the Wyoming line, the precipitation was continuous, ranging from one-fourth to half an inch.

On the Northwestern light to heavy rains visited every portion of the Black Hills line from Fremont to Gordon and up the Bonesteel branch as far as the Niobrara river.

The Burlington was visited by heavy rains along the Billings line from Lincoln to Ravenna, while on the main line heavy to light showers fell at most points between Holdrege and the Colorado state line.
