New Cavalry Equipment.

Arrangements are being made for the practical test in the field of the articles of the new cavalry equipment, recommended by a board of officers of which Colonel Edward J. McClernand, First cavalry, is president. It is now proposed by Colonel McClernand to have two large troops placed at his disposal, one to be equipped with the old equipment and the other to carry the new equipment. The commands will be of similar size, and it is expected they will be ready to march and maneuver about September 7. The program will be is what the commission plan is ex- road tracks along the line of Fifteenth left to Colonel McClernand, who will take the two troops on a march of at least 500 miles and possibly 750 miles. There will be road marching over all kinds of country, concluding with drills at rapid galts. The cavalry equipment board will, at the conclusion of this march, be able to make the final recommendations regarding the equipment of the mounted troops. The report will come to the War department for approval.

rmy Concentration Plan. Plans are being developed by the general staff of the War department for the concentration of the army at large stations properly situated for military purposes. It will take some time to develop the details of this arrangement. Estimates are being prepared of the cost of shelter, which, according to the present plan, will be temporary in character. The estimates for the army for the next fiscal year have been completed, but if it shall appear that congress is favorably disposed toward the new scheme, it will be an easy matter to amend the estimates. On the appropriation of the money by congress, there will be no delay on the part of the army in transferring and concentrating the troops. The idea, in general, is to construct compact large barracks, which may hold an entire regiment and locate these barracks near the large towns where most of the commissioned officers may find accommodations and receive communications of quarters. By this means there will be saved the cost of constructing quarters, excepting in the case of these officers whose presence on the military reservation is necessary at all times. It is General Wood's idea, also, to keep the cavalry and field artillery garrisons more to the south in those sections of the country where forage is cheap.

cally throughout the year, and where the cost of building riding halls and stables may be greatly reduced. It is desired to establish, moreover, garrisons attaining the proportion of divisional commands. In the end this concentration of troops would be, of course, a great saving in expense for the maintenance of the army as compared with the existing conditions; but it is by no means certain that congress will approve of the proposition. Its opposition to the plan will be derived from the same quarters as that which has produced sufficient influence at the capitol to frustrate all endeavors of the War department to abandon useless posts and reduce the cost
