He attempted to prevent the adoption of the conference report on the compromise currency bill and spoke from 12:30 Friday afternoon until 7:02 Saturday morning, his flow of words broken only by roll call, a parliamentary rule which failed entirely during the last half of his performance. The senator sustained himself by nibbling a chicken sandwich and drinking frequent glasses of milk brought to his seat from the senate restaurant. To save his strength he sat perched on the arm of his chair and talked for the most part in a conversational tone, breaking now and then into a full-throated utterance that made his words audible in the remotest parts of the senate chamber. When it is borne in mind that he talked absolutely without the sympathy of his party, his senator's score was placed at 66,600 words

Up to Senator Fa Follette's achieve ment, the championship was held by Senator William Vincent Allen of Nebraska, who opposed the repeal of the silver purchasing clause of the Sherman act during the extraordinary session of congress, called by President Cleveland adjourned November 3. On October 11 the senate met at 11 o'clock in the morning and did not adjourn until 1:45 on the morning of October '13. About 6 o'clock on the night of the 11th Senator Allen took the floor and began a speech in opposition to the bill. He held the floor uninterruptedly until a few minutes after 8 e'clock the next morning, speaking all the time, save when points of no quorum were made or he was "spelled" by some one else for a few minutes through the reading of newspaper and other articles with which his speech was interpolated. Morgan's Wonderful Score. Senator Morgan of Alabama was in lass by himself. His record is not of continuous talking, but rather of sectional speeches, and his score is un rivalled in congressional annals. On the Panama canal question alone, during the extra session, one speech, delivered tr sections, filled ninety-seven pages of the Congresional Record, making a total of 358,000 words. This was in addition to several speeches delivered on the same subject during the regular session, which closed March 4, 1903. This speech, the last of the most remarkable ever delivered. not so much because of its contents. but because of the age of the man who delivered it. Mr. Morgan was then 78 years old and, although he was in exellent health and nad a vigorous co stitution, to speak four or five hours a day for five days is an ordeal which few men in the full vigor of early manhood could endure. It was also remarkable because the senator used very few notes. He made frequent references to published reports and other documents from which he quoted freely, but the speech was purely extemporaneous, and the senator did not have even a skeleton of the topics to guide him. In the last four years of his life. Senator Morgan's speaches, writings and compilations on the canal totaled 1.696,900 words, a stupendous literafy achievemen, surpassing the written record of Shakespeare or the
