Clara Morris began a divorce action

Clara Morris began a divorce action yesterday against her husband, Ora A. Morris, whom she wed at Glenwood on June 28, 1852. She states in her petition that her domestic unhappiness began soon after their removal to Council Bluffs in 1904 and culminated in September, 1907, when he deserted her. She asks nothing further than absolute divorce.

The fire that destroyed the $3,500 residence of C. W. Bird on Bennett avenue on the morning of July 4 last was recalled by two suits filed yesterday against the insurance companies holding risks on the property and which they have refused to pay. One of the companies is the Hawkeye of Des Moines, which carried two risks, one for $1,500 and the other for $300. The other company is the Firemen's Fund of San Prancisco, which heid a risk of $1,200. The fire was discovered by neighbors at 4 o'clock in the morning. The house had been locked for several days during the absence of Mrs. Bird and separation from her husband following a very brief, but stormy, matrimonial voyage. The flames appeared first in the garret, and the belief was that the fire was caused by short-circuited electric light wires. The place was entirely destroyed with all its contents.

Henry E. Schafer. a locomotive fireman employed by the Northwestern railroad, applied to the Council Bluffs police last night for assistance in locating his wife, whom he married little more than a year ago. He wanted the police to raid a residence on East Broadway not far from Honson street, where, he said, the woman would be found consorting with negroes. He was directed to the residence of Police Judge Snyder for a warrant, but had not returned at 11 o'clock. Schafer said his only purpose in seeking the woman was to recover a valuable little dog that he loved far better than the woman. He went to the house late last night to get the dog, but was denied admittance by a negro. He said if he got the dog he would leave at once for Kansas City and begin life anew in a new field. The police were able to confirm Schafer's story that he had made a atrong effort to reclaim the woman and had spent many months at the task, seeking the assistance of the police at least once.

Stone to bring the suit to contest the will, upon the agreement to give them 30 per cent of the amount recovered, which would have been the entire $40,000. Strong testimony was adduced to show the soundness of the mind of the aged woman. Dr. James Donelon, who had been her physician since 1883, testified that he had seen her almost daily until her death, and that there was not a mement when her mind was not clear and strong. Other witnesses were equally competent and certain. The bulk of the property was devoted to charitable purposes. In addition to the other larger bequests were these:
