Physicians Baffled in Efforts to Wake Sleeping Hotel Guest

George Seton, an Iowa farmer stopping at the Astor hotel, Thirteenth and Dodge streets, went to sleep about 9 o'clock Friday night, and so far no one has been able to arouse him.

C. P. Boswell, the clerk, did his best to get Seton up, pulling the bed clothing from him, shaking him, and doing all those pet things which are supposed to awaken the drowsiest of persons.

Boswell gave up the job and called the police, and they failed. The police surgeons were summoned, and they came with a battery of hypodermic syringes, which were brought into play without effect.

Seton's respiration seems to be normal, and in his state of unconsciousness his condition does not differ from that of the ordinary sleeping person. Failure to awaken him, though extreme measures have been taken, has aroused keen interest among the police surgeons, and they are beginning to wonder whether or not they have a case of the sleeping sick man.

John S. Ferguson and Fannie Butler were denied a license because one of them was divorced less than six months ago.
