TENNESSEE VETERAN'S REUNION

Porty-first Gathering of Society is Held at Council Bluffs.

The Catober sun was never brighter and the incomparable climate that blesses Omaha and Council Bluffs never showed a more kindly disposition than when all nature joined in a warm and smiling of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee when they reached Council Bluffs yesterday morning to enjoy the fortyfirst reunion of the society and celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the army. Enjoying the same hospitable welcome were surviving members of the Fourth Iowa infantry, the regiment to which General Dodge received his first assignment as an officer, Dodge's Second lows battery, and the lows commandery of the military order of the Loyal legion. The members of those organizations, now dwindled to a few gray and wrinkled men, gathered to spend a few happy hours, some meeting ofter the clapse of many years and journeying half way across the con-

The train bearing General and Mrs. Grant from New York did not carriages invited to the funeral, which arrive until early in the afternoon. Mrs. Montgomery, daughter of General Dodge, was among the number at the train to meet him. The party was taken to the Grand hotel in an automobile, where the women provided for the comfort of Mrs. Hold Annual Meeting Grant, but her husband was given no time. He was escorted directly from the automobile to the auditorium of the Elk's the annual stockholders' meeting of the Fourth Iowa infantry and Dodge's batclub house where the reunion of the Union Pacific raliroad, held here this trey were having their reunion. General Grant turned a smiling face and bowed in recognition of the cheers.

The annual business meetings of all the organizations were held during the forenoon, the Army of the Tennessee at the Elks' club and the Loyal Legion at the auditorium of the public library. The others had but little business ot attend to and held informal gatherings at the Neumayer and Kiel hotels, but reunions, in groups of one or two or many, at all of the hotels and on the streets. All of the members of the society of the Army of the Tennessee who had reached the city at that hour gathered at the Elks' club house at 10 o'clock to hold the annual business meeting. Not more than half the total number who enough to fill the room. The husiness meeting was brief, for the society has but little business to care for. General Dodge, president of the society, presided. The chief thing was the selection of the place for holding the reunion next year. The practice, however, is not definitely to decide this, but to leave it to the executive officers and a committee apcointed for that purpose.

The committee named was Colonel Wiliams, B. Keeler, Major Vespasan Warner, Captain C. W. Fracker, Captain Owen Francis and Mrs. G. A. Busse, wife of former Mayor Busse of Chicago. There were many invitations, but the decision will not be announced for several months. There was considerable talk of Peoria, Ill., as most anxious and likely to secure The committee to select officers was omposed of Colonel William H. Barnum, Major Samuel Mahon, Captain T. S. Chamberlain as corresponding secretary and Smith Hickenlooper, treasurer, all present officers, and to name twelve vice presidents, one of whom hall be a woman, the wife or daughter of a member. These committees will re-prosperous. The principal events in the arly afteron was the reunion of the Fourth Iowa nfantry and Dodge's Second battery, which occurred in the auditorium of the Elks' club, lasting from 1:30 to nearly 4 The Dodge Light Guards escorted the veterans from their quarters to the building, headed by a band. General Dodge presided, surrounded by all of the executive officers. Every foot of available space was occupied.
