JAPANESE WOMEN AT HOME

"Fashions Do Not Vary and They Have No Brice-Brace in Their Homes."

Japanese women are serene, smiling and happy because for them fashions never vary and they have no brice-brace in their homes. The Japanese maiden has a cultivated sense for hue, and her eye for color is carefully educated by an intelligent contemplation of the beauties of nature. She is never at a loss or ill at ease in society, for her etiquette teachers have trained her to be perfectly poised. As for her home, it contains only those things which are necessary and a few things which are very beautiful. This is the opinion expressed by Mrs. Marjorie Bacon, who recently returned from a trip to Japan, where she has been studying social conditions and the art of the country. In the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Press. She says: "When you start furnishing your house, eliminate all but the necessary and the beautiful. Then go over all your goods and chattels and put away everything except those objects which unite the two requisites of real work and artistic value. The American people have started to pattern after the Japanese in building their summer homes, and especially in furnishing 'the bedrooms. Many fastidious people are having their bedrooms fitted up with such simplicity that only the presence of a brass bed, a thing not found in the Japanese house, betokens the western owner. The Japanese lacquered floor is replaced by highly polished tile and the walls are tinted a delicate soft color and are painted in such a way that they can be washed down from top to bottom. A triple mirror and table or a chiffonier replace the old-fashioned bureau. On this is the lacquer box for brush and comb, which is frequently made for the Japanese beauty, and comes from abroad. All Japanese women have these little boxes, usually about a foot long and two or three inches deep. In this they place the implements of their toilet and their make-up: wooden combs, scissors and pincers, camellia oil for the hair, rouge for the lips and white beauty powder of which they use more than any other western sister. One beautiful print or picture of the moon is a feast for the eye which used to stray over the weird assortment of old-time pictures, gradually finding their way from parlor to bedroom in the evolution of the family taste."

Transforms Complexion; Wins Social Favors

"I had been unable to transform my complexion so quickly, so completely, by a unique process I had just learned of. I never could have attended the Charity Ball." A certain social favorite, told me this. "When I beheld myself in the mirror after a night's troubled sleep, I saw I was becoming heavy-eyed and pale. I could not take, and attend the ball, the long rest my physician advised. A friend suggested I get an ounce of mercuric wax at the drugist's and use it as I would cold cream. I did—the result is apparent. "In a week I had a new complexion. The wax took off the old skin, with its worry lines—so gradually, there was no discomfort. Now you see the fresh, bright under skin, with its youthful glow and expression."—Saturday Evening Herald (Chicago).—Adv.

All but six of the survivors of Dodge's battery, the Second Iowa, and one of the most famous in point of length of service, personnel and efficiency, are shown in this picture, taken at the reunion of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee in Council Bluffs. The battery went into service in the summer of 1862, and was not mustered out until July, 1865. It was fighting all of the time, and was in every big engagement and the hundreds of skirmishes that constituted the brilliant record of the Army of the Tennessee. It had the best guns in the service, and the men who served them were the best gunners in the service. It had no military discipline whatever. Every man did exactly as he pleased, and every one was competent to be commander. It never had but two commanders, Captain (now Judge) J. R. Reed and Captain N. T. Spoor, both of Council Bluffs, each big, beneficent, kind and boon companions of every other man in the battery. The men were drilled only in how to handle the guns. Their first instructions were imparted by Joseph R. Rawley, a re-enlisted private from the regular army artillery corps. He was a wonderful shot, but every man in the command became his equal by the constant practice in actual warfare. Every practice shot was at a living target. Their guns were really powerful weapons for those days. They had four twelve-pound Napoleon howitzers and two ten-pound Rodman rifles. The rifles were wonderfully accurate, and every man in the command boasted that he could hit a hummingbird three miles away. The rifles shot a conical shell with a heavy bursting charge, and so wonderfully precise did the men become that they boasted their ability to keep a shell in the air all the time. For siege purposes they had a Parrott rifle that carried a thirty-pound shell. Volunteers were required to tell of the events in which this battery participated in connection with the general military operations, but other volumes might be written detailing the incidents stored in the memories of the men whose faces gaze from this photograph. ## MORERA, BRIGAND, IS TAKEN

Desperate Spanish Bandit Ravaged Three Frontiers.

ACTRESS FOUGHT BY HIS SIDE

Dramatization of "Monsieur Pickwick" Presented in Paris—International Genetic Congress May Meet in Prisco.

PARIS, Oct. 14.—The Spanish brigand Morera, of whom many tales of ferocity and daring are told in lonely mountain districts of northern Portugal and in the Gallician province of Spain, has been captured by Portuguese troops. Morera was the old-fashioned bandit of romance living in a cave high in the mountains. He had been a bull-fighter of renown in Madrid who escaped to the hills after a scene of violence. There he was followed by the actress Lola. For some time Morera had led a life of desperate adventure, marauding in three countries, for sometimes he would penetrate into southern France and sack a village or plunder and burn a chateau. Usually he operated in Spain and Portugal until his excesses in one country became intolerable. Then he would go into the other. For some months he has been devastating the district of Valongo, near Oporto. Last Friday a detachment of Portuguese troops surprised Morera and his band of sixteen men and pursued them to their cave in the mountains. Two brigands were killed and six wounded in the first heavy volley of the troops. Lola fired her revolver with utmost coolness, wounding two soldiers. She, Morera and the survivors were overpowered. In the cave a quantity of loot was found which will be divided among the captors if owners are not found.

Pickwick in a Paris Play

The Dickens passion in Paris reached a climax with the performance of "Monsieur Pickwick" at the Athene. This little theater was packed with nobilities at the invitation first night, and judging from the applause which followed the fall of the curtain, the new piece should have a long and prosperous run.

The adaptation of Mr. Duval and Charvaty will be less likely, in the opinion of critics, to appeal to genuine Dickens lovers, armed with page-long quotations, than to the fashionable French Anglophile who is ready to accept whatever is offered by the land of Shakespeare. But, while of necessity many liberties have been taken with the original scheme, it would be idle to deny the ingenuity with which the various incidents have been chosen and grouped together. In an entertainment lasting three hours it would be utterly impossible to expect more than a glimpse at the most important figures in Dickens' masterpiece.

The Noise from Tulsa

From the exuberant pen of the publicity-bomber of Tulsa, Okla.: "The building of a city such as Tulsa, though in the midst of a vast and resourceful empire, has not been free from struggle, but the threatening clouds that gathered about the human landscape have now been dissipated. The city has achieved a triumph that is only prophetic of a greater destiny. Over her homes now floats old glory, and free people, with local self-government, exultantly raise this emblem of progress so that the breeze of the north, south, east and west may kiss it and the sun of all the earth reflect it."

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

Mrs. B. C. Shelton, who will take charge of the postal savings bank in Los Angeles, is in the hospital, and Mrs. Shelton has been connected with the auditor in the Postoffice department.

A Philadelphia woman says that all men are bored and advise wives to marry if they would be happy. Some one wants to know if the fellow who so many divorced women immediately re-marry. Possibly they enjoy being miserable, as usual.

"Young man," says a western paper, "if you should come across a girl who, with a face as radiant as a sunflower, says as you appear at the door: 'I'll be busy for half an hour, for the dishes are not washed.' Just right right down on the doorstep and wait for her."

Miss Violet Oakley of Cleveland will paint the mammoth mural decorations of the new court house in Cleveland, O. She is valued as one of the best artists of the new statehouse of Pennsylvania. She will receive $5,000 for her work in Cleveland, and will receive the first American constitutional convention.

Mrs. Harriet Aahy of Des Moines, Ia., was the only woman speaker at the convention of the National Y. W. C. A. in Kansas City last week. Her talk was on "The Farmer's Wife." The object of visiting women to the convention was to find out the needs of the women of the country and to study the methods by which they conserve their resources.

Margaret McMillan, writing in England about the school clinic in England, says as a general thing, better teeth than those of the children of the poor have. She got her information from observation of the school clinic of Chicago, which she visited in England at the Bedford school.

Mrs. Mary K. O'Sullivan would like to be a grant officer in Boston, Mass., but there seems to be a preference of opinion as to whether women can climb or not. The attorney general has been appointed to a decision on the question of the women of the country with Miss Jane Addams in Chicago and has gained the experience that would be of great value in the work if she is appointed.

HUSBAND CATCHING BY FAT WOMEN

Many a too plump lady is groaning in spirit, at this moment, as she lolls back with a lollipop between finger and thumb, at the thought of her matrimonial chances.

She tells herself she can never give up her lolling and her lollipop and go in for exercising and dieting instead. Not even for a husband. Yet one glance over her bulging breasts, at her equally well-adorned hips, tells her all hope is vain unless she reduces.

Now, such girls are simply behind the times, or they would not worry about their reducing. They would reduce—and do so without disturbance of their appetite for candy or luscious cake. All that is needed to take off twelve to sixteen ounces a day, and rapidly reduce the hips, chin, abdomen, etc., is pleasant, elegant Marmora's Prescription.

Get the fat off where it settles most and see what change will be toward attracting the men. The tablets are not injurious in any way; being made after the famous Marmora's Prescription—viz. y. o. Marmora, l. o. M. E. C. Camara Aromalio, 2 1/2 oz. Peppermint Water; and they are not expensive. The Marmora Co., 187 1/2 Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich., and all druggists, asking only twenty-five cents for a large case.—Adv.
