CO-OPERATION STATE'S NEED

President of Municipal Leagues His Keynote at Banquet.

COMMERCIAL CLUB IS HOST

Speeches Along Same Line at Gathering—Ex-Mayor Love of Lincoln Talks on Municipal Ownership.

Visiting members of the Nebraska League of Municipalities were guests Thursday night of the Omaha Commercial club at a dinner given in the club rooms. President David Cole of the Omaha Commercial club presided and addresses were delivered by Howard H. Badridge of Omaha, Robert P. Starr of Loup City, George W. Craig of Omaha, Mayor J. C. Dahlin and Senator G. M. Hitchcock. President Cole introduced Mr. Badridge, who was toastmaster, and who introduced as the first speaker the president of the League of Municipalities, Robert P. Starr, who discussed the value of the convention and the problems it must meet.

Want Closer Relations.
President Starr pointed out the necessity for co-operation between cities of the state. "We need Omaha," he said, "and you need us. We want to work together."

The work of the convention as an insight into municipal affairs and its success in this mission was outlined.

Senator Hitchcock followed with the statement the towns of Nebraska all had the nucleus of a larger and thriving city and that the spirit of the west was the kind to gladden the people who wanted to see it prosper.

Mayor Dahlin congratulated the convention on its success and said he had listened to every paper and the entire discussion and had secured much information which he could use to advantage. "And, furthermore," he said, "I'm going to be at the heels of this convention when it closes, still looking for information."

Craig on Paving.
City Engineer George W. Craig of Omaha delivered a lengthy and interesting address to the banquet on the value of the various paving materials. He discussed macadam, the bituminous, the bitulithic, the penetration method, asphalt, brick, stone and concrete, and said that no particular pavement could be recommended as the best for any particular town or village. He pointed out the defects and the good qualities of each material.

Mr. Craig roundly denounced cities for the practice of grading streets in such an expensive manner as many of them do and suggested that a competent architect or landscape gardener study the problem and that streets be laid to conform to the country instead of the country being made to conform to the square-cornered policy of modern street construction.

Love for Public Ownership.
Ex-Mayor Don L. Love of Lincoln at the afternoon session upheld the virtues of municipal ownership of public utilities. As reasons for municipal ownership, he said, the cost of the product furnished would be cheapened and cited the example of Lincoln as compared with Omaha. As further reason for municipal ownership he advanced the proposition that private corporations corrupted politics, controlling always a certain and sometimes majority percentage of voters.

Talk on Good Roads.
The second day of the convention began with an address by Frank G. Pierce, secretary of the Iowa League of Municipalities, Marshalltown, Ia., on "Co-Operation in Road Building." He advocated a graduated tax system by which the state, the county, the township, the village and the farmers most directly benefited by the construction of a road join in paying the expense of building and maintaining it. J. C. Fetter of Lincoln led a general discussion, which followed the Iowa man's address.

Heard at the Convention.
An interested subscriber wants to know "if the Commercial club took the Nebraska League of Municipalities convention a banquet, is it deleterious?" Don't arrest him, he has a wife and six kids.

Fifteen automobiles carried the visiting delegates on a tour about the city prior to the banquet. The water works plant was visited and inspected and the trip also included a visit to the electric light plant and the street railway plant.

Chief of Police Donahue in a paper read before the delegates aroused such a flame of interest that dozens of the visitors requested him to show them the collection of the Bertillon system of criminal identification has here, and this chief did so willingly, explaining its possibilities.

Ex-Mayor Don Love of Lincoln was pleased with the convention and the interest the visitors exhibited in his paper on municipal ownership. Those most vitally interested in the municipal ownership of public utilities congratulated him with the statement that "it was the most comprehensive summing up of the situation I have heard."

Most active interest has been manifested in the subject of municipal water supplies. Many of the cities of the league have sent their water commissioners and engineers to discuss with Charles H. Crowley of Omaha discussed the purification of water before the convention he was kept answering questions and giving advice for a half hour after concluding his address.

Mayor "Jim" has been a faithful attendant at all sessions and apparently has enjoyed the discussion as much as any of the delegates. President Starr was referring to ex-Mayor Love of Lincoln and he said "Gentlemen, I am most happy to see that you are so interested and so glad to hear that Mayor Love of Omaha—just as the laugh started Mayor Dahlin was reaching for his hat but he was too late and so had to grin and bear it."

Mayor George F. Wolf, mayor of Fremont, heard the discussion of means for the prevention of fires with intense interest and several times during the talk by Fire Commissioner Randall he moved a scared right hand. "How did you get it in a fire?" he was asked after the meeting. "We were attempting to close a door in my store when it was burning that an adjacent building would not be destroyed. I got caught in the door and this is the result. That was at Fremont in 1890."

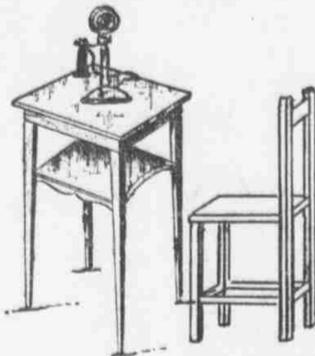

The city hall has been decorated with flags and chrysanthemums. So many chrysanthemums were placed on the desks used by the President and the secretary that it caused the latter some embarrassment. It began reading a document aloud and the delegates with craned their necks to find the owner of the voice. When the president named the names of the delegates the secretary kept on reading and the delegates got their first glimpse of him, not a very bulky but a mighty business-like figure.

As such it will be his duty to take charge of the Jewish religious organizations in the cities and towns of those two states.

AD MEN ARE TO GO TO DALLAS

Organize a "One Hundred to Dallas" Club at Banquet Last Night.

NATIONAL PRESIDENT HERE

Advertising Men Will Occupy the Palpits of the Churches at Dallas and Make a Tour of Texas.

Inspired by the presence of National President George W. Coleman of Boston and the reading of a telegram of invitation from the Dallas Ad club, the Omaha Ad club last night organized the "One Hundred to Dallas" club, the purpose of which will be to see that 100 Omaha advertising men attend the convention at Dallas, Tex., next May, of the Associated Ad Clubs of America.

About fifty men became charter members of the new club. A. L. Gale of the Darlow Advertising agency was elected president; P. F. Fodrea of the Omaha Trade exhibit, secretary, and C. C. Rosewater of The Bee, treasurer.

Mr. Coleman told of plans for the convention, which he said, would eclipse that at Boston this year. The convention will be unique, he said, in that it will be opened on Sunday by the preaching of lay sermons by advertising men from eight or ten leading pulpits of the city. After the three days' business session at Dallas, all the delegates will be taken on a five days' tour of the state, visiting Fort Worth, Waco, Galveston and San Antonio.

The development of the work of the national association was discussed at length by President Coleman. A prime need of the advertising business, he said, is honesty in advertising, and a committee of the association is now drafting a law, which if passed by the various state legislatures, will abolish misrepresentation in advertising, provided the ad clubs do their duty toward the enforcement of the law. Another need, he said, is the development of efficiency in methods.

A. L. Gale's Young Men's Christian association class in advertising and salesmanship were present to hear Mr. Coleman's address, which was preceded by short talks on advertising by Robert Manley of J. L. Brandeis & Sons, C. C. Rosewater of The Bee, J. C. Johnson of Schindler & Mueller, R. B. Wallace of the Payne Investment company, P. F. Fodrea of the Trade Exhibit, R. E. Sunderland of Sunderland Bros. company, C. C. George of George & Co., Paul Skinner of the Skinner Macaroni company, Robert A. Smith of the Union Pacific, S. R. McKelvie of Lincoln and A. V. Pease of Fairbury.

Mr. Fodrea urged club members to submit designs in the Omaha Manufacturers' association trade mark contest.

Aged Naval Surgeon Ends Own Life with Bullet from Pistol

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Rear Admiral John Yeatman Taylor, retired, former medical director of the United States navy and one of the most distinguished naval surgeons in the country, ended his life here today by shooting himself in the head with a navy pistol. The officer was alone in his study at the time, but the butler hearing the report found him unconscious. He died in half an hour. Admiral Taylor was 82 years old and had had a notable career as a naval surgeon. His death had long been poor and the death in an automobile accident at Wilmington, Del., two years ago of his only son, Andrew Bryson Taylor, was a severe shock to the aged surgeon. He never left the house afterwards and despondency over this sorrow and the hopeless condition of his own health is believed to have prompted him to take his life.

Born in East Nottingham, Pa., Admiral Taylor was graduated from Jefferson Memorial college in Philadelphia in 1852 and was appointed assistant surgeon in the United States navy the following year. He was with Farragut on the Onida in the battle of Mobile bay during the civil war and in that encounter won distinction.

Recognition came rapidly to Dr. Taylor. He became medical inspector in 1872 and medical director in 1879 and was retired in 1891. He also served as fleet surgeon and was in charge of naval hospitals at Washington, Norfolk and New York. In recognition of his civil war services he was advanced to the rank of rear admiral in 1898.

Lorimer's Defense is Conspiracy by Political Enemies

CHICAGO, Nov. 15.—Sharp questioning intended to show, as he said, that the bribery charges in the election of William Lorimer as United States senator were the result of a "conspiracy" was put by Elbridge Haney, attorney for Mr. Lorimer, to State's Attorney Wayman today. Mr. Wayman had told of his step to prosecute Lee O'Neil Brov who was accused on Charles White's confession of having paid "jackpot," "Lorimer money" to White.

Attorney Haney asked Wayman whether in bringing an indictment against Brown, the state's attorney had letted to follow up clues that might lead to material evidence. "We might have called Mr. Lorimer before the grand jury. He might have given material evidence. But we did feel we could get him," answered witness.
