GOLD DUST makes dish-washing easy

The use of a little Gold Dust in your dish-water will make your dishes whiter, sweeter and cleaner than they ever can be without it. Unlike soap, Gold Dust does more than clean the surface. It goes deep after germs and hidden food particles, and sterilizes everything it touches.

Gold Dust does all the hard part of the work without your assistance, because it begins to dissolve and clean the moment it touches the water.

When you have to wash dishes 1095 times a year, the Gold Dust method of saving half your time and half your labor means something.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work

M. E. BROTHERHOOD SPREADS

Steps Taken to Launch State Organization in Nebraska.

FORMING OF FRATERNAL LINES

There is a Grand Lodge with Subordinate Bodies and Just Enough Secrecy to Make the Organization Interesting.

At the First Methodist church yesterday steps were taken to organize the Methodists of Nebraska under the banner of the Methodist Brotherhood. The organization is one that was founded at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1808 and has spread with wonderful rapidity over the states of the east. It has the endorsement of the Methodist church everywhere and is now being taken up by the churchmen of the central west.

The Methodist Brotherhood is a society of men of the church, or those who affiliate with the organization. It consists of a central body that corresponds to a grand lodge, and then in the towns and cities where there are local churches there are branches. There is a smattering of secrecy about it, enough, at least, to interest all. There are the regular officers, consisting of president, vice president, secretary and treasurer. Then there are numerous committees, the members of which look after the sick; entertainments, arranging programs for meetings and many other things.

To become a member an applicant must be passed upon by a committee and if accepted the initiation follows, and this is said to furnish considerable amusement. At least two-thirds of the members of any local chapter must be members of the Methodist church in which the chapter is located.

For Mutual Improvement.

The prime objects of the Methodist brotherhood is to effect the mutual improvement of its members by religious, social, literary and physical culture; to promote the spirit and practice of Christian brotherhood; to increase fraternal interest among men; to develop their activity in all that relates to social, civic and industrial betterment, and to build up the church in particular by leading men into communion and fellowship.

Besides the organization for men, there is a kindred organization for the boys, some of the features are similar to those of the Boy Scouts. For them there is a drill manual and scouting. In a general way they are under the direction of the brotherhood.

Citizens Object to Coal Yard Location

H. H. Haner, Thirty-first and Boyd streets, appeared before the council in committee of the whole Monday and declared that the citizens of his neighborhood are prepared to contest in the higher courts the right of the L. B. McCoun Coal company to locate in that vicinity. The coal company was recently granted the right to build a coal and lumber yard and a switch track is to be constructed.

Mr. Haner with several of his neighbors appeared with a signed protest and objected to the action of the council in granting the coal company's request. He claimed it would result in a nuisance, as smoke from the engines hauling coal and lumber to the yards would be continually blowing into the houses and that housewives would be unable to hang laundry on the lines because of it.

Fred P. Shields explained that Mr. Haner would not be seriously affected by the location of the yard and that the damage would be much less serious than it was considered by the residents. "The property holders know," said he, "that some kind of a building must be ultimately located there and several of them have agreed that a coal and lumber yard will be no more of a nuisance than a factory or some other institution." The council deferred action.

Appraisers reported on the cost of removing the Knox Presbyterian church at Nineteenth and Ohio streets to make way for a change proposed in the boulevard. Objection was entered to the appraisers' report, which was $4,500, and the objections were sustained. An effort may be made to have half the cost of the change paid from the park funds.

An objection against paying the special tax for grading Twenty-third street from Bancroft to Vinton was made by property holders and as some of the council believed the protest justified, the city engineer was instructed to ascertain what a proper charge would be.

CHRIS SHARB INJURED WHEN CAR MAKES MOVE

Chris Sharb, address unknown, had not a place to lay his head. He was sleepy and so tired that 5,000 glasses of that universally advertised beverage could not relieve his fatigue. He asked in the most pitiful of tones for a downy couch of everyone he met. It seemed he could not find a person or an inanimate thing but that glowered at him and refused him rest. The telephone posts stepped aside in disdain when he attempted to lean against them; the sidewalks seaward and whirled him into the gutter when he lay upon them. And the gutters pushed and nudged him out when he asked their cobblestones to be his bedfellows. The very ground jumped up and slapped his face when he looked too pleadingly. So there was nothing for Chris Sharb to do but walk. At last, staggering weak, he reached the railroad tracks at Twelfth and Jones streets. The soft cinders between the rails seemed quite inviting to him and a box car nearby jumped at him and stretched his body upon a rail. As he stared up at the box car and breathed his thanks, he heard far down the tracks the engine bell—the welcoming chiming of dreamland. Then the low, deliberate click of wheels upon the rail clattered in his ears, growing nearer, louder and harsher. Sharb looked up at the box car; it frowned and shook with rage against the rails, and he was hurled and whirled into the gutter when he lay upon them. And the gutters pushed and nudged him out when he asked their cobblestones to be his bedfellows. The very ground jumped up and slapped his face when he looked too pleadingly. So there was nothing for Chris Sharb to do but walk. At last, staggering weak, he reached the railroad tracks at Twelfth and Jones streets. Sharb looked up at the box car; it frowned and shook with rage against the rails, and he was hurled and whirled into the gutter when he lay upon them. And the gutters pushed and nudged him out when he asked their cobblestones to be his bedfellows. The very ground jumped up and slapped his face when he looked too pleadingly. So there was nothing for Chris Sharb to do but walk. At last, staggering weak, he reached the railroad tracks at Twelfth and Jones streets. The soft cinders between the rails seemed quite inviting to him and a box car nearby jumped at him and stretched his body upon a rail. As he stared up at the box car and breathed his thanks, he heard far down the tracks the engine bell—the welcoming chiming of dreamland. Then the low, deliberate click of wheels upon the rail clattered in his ears, growing nearer, louder and harsher.
