

PUPILS PRACTICE CHARITY
Thanksgiving Day Spirit Taught by Teachers of Omaha.

MANY PROGRAMS ARE GIVEN
Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers is Enacted by the Pupils of the Various Schools Throughout the City.

Thanksgiving day was the beginning of a brief vacation for pupils in the public schools of the city, but the day preceding was devoted entirely to observance of the occasion, enlarging on an annual custom of every public school in the city, brought donations for the poor—food, clothing, fuel and articles of every variety, adapted to sundry uses. The students of the high school gave $15 in money for the benefit of the Visiting Nurses.

Programs embracing a history of Thanksgiving in the United States with illustrations of paintings and poems from well known artists and poets were given in all the schools. Readings and recitations and "hymns of high Thanksgiving" were on the programs in the elementary grade rooms. All school work was arranged to impress the children with the spirit of the day.

In schools with a large percentage of foreign-born pupils the programs were not less elaborate nor the spirit of joyous Thanksgiving less evident than in the All-American buildings. It was necessary in a few instances to laboriously repeat the history of the day to those who could not speak English, but once they got the idea they needed no further prompting, said a teacher.

The donations this year were larger than ever before. All the charitable institutions in the city and families in straitened circumstances will be benefited by the gifts. Each school will turn its donation over to an institution designated weeks ago, so that all donations will be equally distributed for charity. Principals of schools in the poorer districts will retain a part of the gifts and give them to the poorer and more needy families.

Little children carried baskets of good cheer to many families after the donations had been received at the schools. Miss Lizzie Banker, principal at the Pacific, started some of the little tots home with food, given for Thanksgiving to the deserving. The practice spread to other schools and many needy families were well provided for by thoughtful principals who have known of their wants, but were unable to assist them until Thanksgiving brought its tons of gifts.

WOOD MODELS OF OLD HOLLAND

Children See Old Town from Which the Pilgrims Started.

The little first grade boy at the Farnam school who wore a linen suit through the bitter cold of the early days of the week is now proudly and warmly clothed in blue serge, for his teacher saw to it that he was provided for from the store of things the children of the school brought as a Thanksgiving offering.

Mrs. Harrison, principal of the school, says the spirit of unselfishness was more manifest than ever before. The children brought eatables and clothing for the needy until the entire lower hall was full of them. Aside from the goods sent to eight families that have children in the school, all of these contributions, a full wagonload, were given to Miss Magee of the City mission for distribution.

In every room a Thanksgiving program was given by the children. The children of the four first grades were dressed as Puritans and Indians. Those of the first grade learned the story of the first Thanksgiving from an object lesson showing wooden models of the city of Leyden, Holland, from which the Pilgrims started, the Mayflower, the cabins in New England, the Indians and the woods. For Plymouth Rock, a small cork was used.

Miss Marie Ryan made Puritan aprons for her second grade pupils and they made their own paper caps.

As he has bestowed upon his people, "I feel sorry for the man," said Dean Tackock, "who looks upon the fields of golden grain, blue skies, green meadows and sees nothing to be thankful for but material wealth and the means of feeding men. The beauties of nature also are to be enjoyed and thanks for them should be returned. They are for the sweetening of the soul and are the meat that does not perish. The spiritual needs of man are recognized and food to satisfy them also is given by God, and I urge that in our enjoyment of physical blessings and the bounties for the material man we should not forget to give thanks for these even greater gifts."

Children of Foreign Birth Help Honor Thanksgiving Day

Although 900 of the 400 students at the Pacific school, Pacific and Twelfth streets, are of foreign birth or parentage and many have just struggled up to an intelligent grip on English, the Thanksgiving program there was one of the best in the city.

Even the little shavers in A and B of the first grade, some of whom were unable to talk in English, caught the spirit of the day and eagerly took part in the exercises. Pictures of the Mayflower were cut from paper, drawn in crude lines by the youngsters on the black board or more accurately portrayed in water colors and crayons by the advanced students.

For the first time donations were given by the students for charitable purposes and Miss Lizzie L. Banker, principal, was surprised at the volume and variety of the gifts. She at once sent little Johnny Thomas with a basket of eatables to his mother, a widow woman with a large family who lives at 1238 South Thirteenth street. Several other little tots were dispatched with provisions for needy families in the neighborhood.

"We will keep some of these donations," said Miss Banker, "and give to families here who we know are in want. The rest of the donations will be given to the Associated Charities."

A Thanksgiving program was rendered by each room in the school. In one of the rooms students of five and six years had drawn pictures of the Mayflower on the blackboard with blue and white chalk. "I doubt if they understand the meaning of Thanksgiving," said the teacher, "but they say they do and so they help the school to observe the occasion."

Miss Minnie Ober has been recently placed in charge of an ungraded room at the school, which has been proving a valuable addition. Students from many grades who have shown a disposition to lag or have not been thoroughly qualified are placed in this room. When they have brought their work up to par they are admitted into their classes.

One of the students in this room was an Italian girl, of but five weeks residence here. She is learning rapidly and will soon be able to enter a class. "Her mother wears mourning," said a teacher, "for her father, who died a few months before they came over. The mother brought her family here to educate them. They put their children in school as soon as they are located in America."

Story of Pilgrim Fathers is Enacted by Train Pupils

Down on Sixth and Hickory at Train school, overlooking the blue Missouri, several hundred boys and girls, mostly children of foreign parents, but loyal young Americans, every one of them, sang and recited verses commemorative of the first Thanksgiving day in as spirited a fashion as if they were Pilgrim fathers were their very own forefathers.

The children of the first grade entertained the small boys and girls of the first A and the kindergarten with a very active playlet, which they have practiced for several weeks under the direction of their teacher, Miss Erlene Jaskalek. For days the boys have gone through the chicken yard picking up the best looking feathers for their Indian costumes and the girls had carefully fashioned their white Puritan caps.

The play opened with Governor Bradford (a black-eyed German "knabe"), and Miss Brewster (a flaxen haired Danish "frenk"), planning the big feast to celebrate the first harvest. The other whites, Miss Standish, John Alden, Priscilla and many others, arrived and after them came Massasoit with a long line of his braves.

The Indians whooped and danced their war dance at one end of the room, while some of the pale-faces hang-banged at imaginary wild turkeys with broom sticks at the other end. Then they all sat around and smoked the peace pipe while the Puritan maids cooked the turkey and set the table. Then all ate from the play plates and cups and saucers.

The first A class with much vim recited the story of Thanksgiving, each one telling an incident except a tiny Italian lassie, who, herself, has just arrived from the old country and does not yet know the English language. But she smiled very hard all the time which was just as good.

In the other grades, the pupils sang, recited, painted pictures of the Mayflower on the briny Atlantic and made truly artistic Thanksgiving cards in conventional designs.

Early in the afternoon there was great excitement packing up and sending off the donations, which the children brought for family help, except on the wagon, which was loaded to overflowing with all sorts of good things—cabbages, potatoes, onions, carrots, eggs, rice, beans, sugar, salt, pepper, rye bread, wheat bread, apples, oranges and bananas.

Office Salts Will for Feast on Ship

"Gee, but I wish I was back in the navy with the rest of the fellows, eating a good navy Thanksgiving dinner and having a whole day of sports," wailed the six "office salts" stationed in the navy recruiting station in the Federal building.

"All the fellows will eat a swell dinner," lamented George Tiller, Surgeon Stratten's assistant, "and they'll have all the trimmings you ever heard of—cranberry sauce, cigars, turkey—m-m-m!" Then after they eat all they can, every one, from the coal passers to the senior officer, joins in the athletic games, and the fellows will all play and 'spout' all day, with not a single thing to do until tomorrow. Gee, but I wish I was back on board ship."

Feast is Spread at House of Hope

A Thanksgiving dinner was enjoyed yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the House of Hope. Among those who enjoyed the feast were a number of persons not regularly cared for at the home. Following the dinner a program of speeches and music was given under the direction of C. W. Savidge.

INGRATITUDE IS COMMON SIN

Rev. Crawford Preaches Sermon at Union Service of Thanks.

SEVEN CONGREGATIONS UNITE
There is Not More Than One Man in Ten Who Has the Spirit of Gratitude, Declares Housecom Park Minister.

Union services of the First Baptist, First Christian, Grace Lutheran, Third Presbyterian, Westminster Presbyterian, St. Mary's Avenue Congregational and the Housecom Park Methodist Episcopal churches were held this morning at 10:30 o'clock at the First Baptist church. Twenty-ninth and Harney streets. Rev. Thomas H. McConnell presided. The sermon was preached by Rev. E. S. Crawford of the Housecom Park church. He dwelt chiefly on the fact that people should be thankful for what they receive from God and not complain because they did not receive everything that they wanted.

"Thanksgiving day is not a day to complain because we have not received everything we would like to have, but a day for praise and thanksgiving for the benefits we have received during the year. This day should be devoted to thinking over the many things God has done for us, and to offer up thanks to Him. This is a day that we should tune our hearts to the music of heaven."

Sin of Ingratitude.
"The spirit of gratitude, however, appears to be our lost chord. To not ascribe a day for thanksgiving is an indirect admission of this weakness on our part. The sin of ingratitude is one of the most popular in the world today. There is on an average of about one man out of ten who has the spirit of gratitude. We are like the man who was caught in a lion trap. A woodcutter passed by the pit in which he fell and was promised a big reward if he would save him. The woodcutter saved the man, but never received the reward. When we are in a dark pit we always make many promises, but how often are they kept?"

"We should not be pessimistic; we should see a silver lining in every cloud. Undoubtedly many things have gone wrong during the year, but you should look on the bright side of life. It is far better to have a broken family circle than to have broken manhood."

God is Not Partial.
"Although we say that God is partial to some persons, this is not true. The gifts and graces of God are all evenly distributed. The riches, the automobiles, the diamonds, the houses, the coats and the willow plumes are partially divided; the greater, higher and better things of this world are evenly distributed. It is far better to be rich in God's gifts than to be rich in this world's goods. If you have health, good hearing and eyesight you are far better off than the person who has money and has not these gifts. I would rather have an appetite today and no turkey than to have a turkey and no appetite."

"We need not go far to find the occasion for gratitude. If we have the spirit, if disaster comes to you, brace up, and with a spirit of gratitude say, 'I will see it through.'"

Rev. J. M. Kerney gave the invocation, the scripture lesson was read by Rev. J. A. Jenkins, Rev. F. P. Ramsay gave the benediction. Music was furnished by the Fifth Baptist church quartet.

HARVEST FEAST IS CELEBRATED
Pretty Service is Held at the Castle Presbyterian Church.

With the harvest festival decorations of two weeks ago still in place, the interior of the Castle Presbyterian church presented an attractive appearance, suggestive of autumn, when Rev. Mr. Houseman, the pastor, conducted the Thanksgiving service yesterday morning.

There was special music for the occasion, the choir, under the direction of Miss Callista Kerr, offering a number of selections appropriate for the day of thanksgiving.

For his text, Rev. Houseman selected the words, the "Benediction," arguing that God's help is the best help; that the Lord's provision is the best provision that can be afforded man. This help was held to be better than bank notes and better than wealth, for while real estate may depreciate in value and

COOKS VIE WITH EACH OTHER

As a Result City and County Prisoners Are Well Fed.

ROCK PILE CLOSED FOR DAY
While Turkey is Not on the Menu at the Jail, There Was Plenty of Other Good Things to Eat.

Rivalry existed between the cooks at the city and county jails yesterday. Each strove to outdo the other in preparing the better meal, and the result was that the prisoners were made happier through the rivalry. In each case the meal was extraordinary and it is a toss-up as to which cook put up the better Thanksgiving dinner.

At 1:30 in the afternoon the prisoners at the county jail sat down to a dinner which possibly eclipsed anything that they may have had, had they been on the outside of prison walls. Two long tables were stretched in the large room on the first floor and they were covered with white paper. All the inmates of the institution were turned loose in the one room and all prisoners, from "vags" to "petterns," were treated alike. The following menu was served: Chicken and dressing with brown gravy and mashed potatoes, celery, pickles, coffee and real rich cream, mince and pumpkin pies and cranberry sauce. The prisoners were all given a holiday and the chain gang did not go out to the rock pile to work up an appetite. The dusting and cleaning of the cells and halls constituted the work for the day.

In the city jail things ran on in the regular routine way, with the exception of a classy dinner served at 3 o'clock. The regular police court was held, but very few of the prisoners were sentenced, the judge evidently thinking of Thanksgiving dinner with one member missing. The prisoners received in their cells the following dinner: Chicken with dressing and brown gravy, roast pork and apple sauce, jelly rolls, celery and olives, pumpkin pies, sweet and Irish potatoes, gooseberry sauce, coffee and hot biscuits.

Charities Society to Keep Some of the Supplies Till Later

The Associated Charities brought good cheer to several families Thanksgiving day. Donations from the schools to the charities were unusually large. Several baskets of food were made up and sent to needy families. Students in some of the schools carried baskets and messenger boys delivered the remainder.

"Some of the supplies we will keep in stock," said Miss Ida V. Jonta of the Charities, "and will distribute them during the winter. We have taken care of several needy families and have a list of others. Our most extensive work will be done about Christmas time, when some of the food and clothing we have received from the schools now will be distributed."

Y. W. C. A. Has Turkey Dinner and Musicals

The cafeteria was closed and all the regular classes and club meetings were called off at the Young Women's Christian association yesterday. A table d'hote turkey dinner was served at 1 o'clock to eighty participants, including the association secretaries. The gymnasium, library and parlors have been in active use all day by the members and their friends.

Many of the children who took part in the programs could scarcely speak the English language, and to hear a little six year old Lithuanian girl recite "The Landing of the Pilgrims" in a broken manner, but accompanied by zealous gesture, would have been excruciatingly funny had not the earnest efforts of the little tots to show their loyalty to their adopted country been so well meant.

TOTS GIVE PROGRAM AT EDWARD ROSEWATER SCHOOL

If the Puritan fathers who came to this country on the Mayflower could only have seen the conglomeration of nationalities celebrating Thanksgiving at the Edward Rosewater school at Thirtieth and Phelps street Wednesday afternoon, they would have indeed had cause to be merry. Each room had a Thanksgiving program of its own, presided by the teacher in charge and carried out by the pupils. "Pieces," songs, and "acting" comprised these programs, and as an extra incentive for the children to do their best in the celebration, school was "let out" early.

Puritans and Indians Feast With Each Other

Indians and Pilgrims met at the Lincoln school to celebrate Thanksgiving day, and in a play, "The First Thanksgiving," written by Miss Helen M. Hiltz, principal of the kindergarten department, depicted the story of the day, the grateful Pilgrims eating their first Thanksgiving feast of fish and deer and wild turkey. All the characters of the play were taken by the little folks. Joseph Drosia was chief Massasoit and buried the hatchet willingly and went to church with the Pilgrims and acted just like his "white brothers." The cast of characters was as follows:

Institute Children Enjoy Big Dinner

All of the children at the Child Saving Institute except, of course, the tiny babies, enjoyed the biggest and best meal of the whole year yesterday noon. The boys and girls—forty-six in all—with faces shining with much scrubbing and real Thanksgiving happiness, assembled about the large table with a centerpiece of yellow chrysanthemums and all sorts of candies, nuts and fruit.

All the eatables were donated by men and women interested in the welfare of the kiddies at the institute and the flowers were the gift of Falconer the florist, who sent them in fresh from his greenhouse. After dinner the children had an extra good time with all sorts of games.
