I see them come, a snow begrizzled host, silent, sullen stream of plodding woes.
The shricking wind with ghoulish glee-foretells their doom,
Each whirling drift a shrouded taunting ghost
Across their path its tangled garments throws.

With heavy, low-hung, shaggy heads and steaming breath And eyes aglow with desperation's fire. With backs that arch below the bitwith backs that arch below the bitter sting
Of sweeping winter winds that wildly wall of death.
They struggle on, impelled by blind desire
For change, and chance relief that change may bring.

see them pause and halt, a mass of dumb despair.

And ever huddle closer as they stand.

A silent, hopeless, fated horde they crowd swhirling drifts sweep madly through the thick'ning air. And shostly screaming demons o'er the land. In hollow ghoulish giee, laugh long and loud.

Into the darkness and the storm they fade away;
I hear no more, nor see them in the night. For unto them no more are time and place.
The morning breaks in silence bleakly cold and gray.
The valley sits in robes of spotless white.
And in her lap there sleeps a vanishing race.
