The foot ball season of 1911 will go down in history as one of miracles. In fact, aside from the sudden transformation of teams from losing teams to victorious teams, and vice versa, even the ball finally began to take part in the extraordinary happenings, and on one day, namely, the day of the Princeton-Dartmouth and Andover-Exeter games, in each of which games the ball performed what would seem to be a miracle, namely, running along the ground for a considerable distance and then bounding up over the crossbar. In the case of the Princeton-Dartmouth game this ball was started by a partially missed drop-kick and thus went over forty yards, hitting the ground occasionally before it struck on its end on some irregularity and leaped up over the goal bar. Then, too, the favorites in a very great proportion of the important games were returned eventually as the losers; nor was there any consistency about these upsets, but they came in the most unexpected ways and upon extraordinary occasions. Not and upon extraordinary occasions. Not only were teams inconsistent in their work, but also individuals. Men who had played steadily through the season until some important game suddenly seemed to lose their perspective and, hence, their effectiveness. This was true in several positions. The principal contests of the year were won and lost through a fumble or a fuke. None of the other work counted. Harvard lost her game to Princeton while attempting a drop-kick under Princeton's goal. Yale lost her game to Princeton, when well into Princeton's territory, by a slip of the ball going through the fullback's hands and being picked up by the Princeton end, who ran the entire two-thirds of the length of the field for a touchdown. Nor could his presence on the spot be regarded as providential for Princeton, for it was his habit. This young man White was the same one who ran two-thirds of the length of the field for Princeton's touchdown against Harvard after a drop-kick. Princeton defeated Dartmouth by the kick already mentioned earlier in this article, which ran forty-five yards and then bounded over the bar. Harvard defeated Dartmouth by a blocked kick. Wisconsin tied Minnesota, (score) scoring Minnesota's touchdown by rushing back the initial kickoff, and still later running half the length of the field for a touchdown for Wisconsin. True it is that on two important Saturdays the weather was atrocious and the fields in a wretched condition. Usually for the important games of late years the conditions have been good.

The forward pass has taken up more prominent position than of old; in fact, in late games considerably less. It has resulted in disaster on one or two occasions in contests that meant a good deal. It has not been productive of any spectacular plays. The inside kick has been, as always, a matter of luck, that is, the ball bounds straight the defensive side, secures possession of it easily and the side on the attack has lost several yards on the kick. That is the difference between the long kick and the short one. If, on the other hand, the ball performs a break and either jumps sideways or hits on the end and bounds clear over the defensive man's head, the play results in a fine gain for the kicker's side, possibly even in a touchdown at very little expenditure of effort. But who can tell which way the ball will bound? Surely, no scientific study or daily practice can forecast the action of this leather sphere.

There seems to be a wide diversity of opinion on the matter of the rules so far as physical injuries are concerned, which only a more careful analysis at the end of the season really determine. Without statistical information it seems as if injuries to the head, arm, and shoulder had been more prevalent this year than before, but injuries to the body or spine much less. The officials have, on the whole, done a good job. There was in mid-season too great laxity in two respects, namely, allowing the man attempting to block the kick to run into the kicker after he had gotten the ball away and allowing pushing and pulling, chiefly pushing of the runner after he reached the line. If men in the back field follow the runner into the line he endeavors to go through, nine times out of ten they must, even if they keep their hands off him, eventually push him, for he is stopped when they are still running forward and they go against him.

H. S. Coach Has Great Record

Joy Clark, the newly appointed basket ball coach of the Omaha High school, is one of the best informed men in the west on the popular gymnasium game and with an abundance of material on hand it is expected he will be able to put Omaha High on the map this season.

Clark was captain of the championship local high school five in 1905 and started at right forward. In 1906 he showed up as a regular forward on the Denver university team. The years 1907 and 1908 saw him playing right forward on the championship University of Chicago five. In both these years Chicago won the national intercollegiate basket ball title, defeating Pennsylvania, who won the eastern title in these two years in the deciding games.

In 1909 Clark was elected captain of the Chicago five and in that year he coached the team in addition to playing. Since then he has retired from active participation in the game.

The new coach will begin practice immediately and expects to have the squad in shape within the next three weeks for some preliminary games with teams of the Young Men's Christian association prior to the opening of the regular school schedule.

Practice will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons of each week in the Young Men's Christian association gymnasium under the direction of Coach Clark. The squad will also practice two afternoons of each week in the gymnasium at the high school.

VALLEY CONFERENCE MEETS

Athletic Matters Pertaining to Missouri Schools Considered.

SCHOOLS ASKING ADMITTANCE

Oklahoma, Kansas Aggies and Washburn College Seeking Place in Organization—Basket Ball Matters First.

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 7.—Representatives of all the Missouri Valley conference schools were in the city today for the purpose of discussing the basket ball rules, arranging the conference schedules and naming officials for the games. Other conference matters undoubtedly will be taken up, but the meeting called for tonight and tomorrow is announced as a basket ball session.

The following conference representatives are here: C. L. Brewer, director of athletics at Missouri; W. O. Hamilton, manager of athletics at Kansas; Dr. R. G. Clapp, director of athletics at Nebraska; Early O. Eager, athletic manager at Nebraska; E. O. Steffen, foot ball coach and assistant director at Nebraska; Glyde Williams, director of athletics at Ames; J. L. Griffith, athletic director at Drake; and F. O. Everhardt, director of athletics at Washington University.

The applications of schools desiring a place in the Missouri Valley conference probably will be considered by the directors. Oklahoma probably will find more favor than the other applicants, although the Kansas Agricultural college and Washburn will have support. The question of summer base ball may be discussed and conference schools that plan to turn out base ball teams probably will arrange schedules. The representatives will go to Lawrence Saturday for the purpose of arranging foot ball schedules.

UNIVERSITY OF OMAHA BOYS WIN THEIR SWEATERS

The athletic board at the University of Omaha has awarded the coveted "O" to fourteen members of the foot ball squad for participation in foot ball games during the last season. Those receiving letters are:

Neal Parsons, left end; Stanton Salisbury, left tackle; Victor Jorgenson, left guard; Charles Frandsen, center; Peter Strehlow, right guard; John Seto; right tackle; Ray Reel, right end; George Parish, quarterback; Andrew Dow, left half and quarterback; Almet Solomon, fullback; Paul Selby, right half; Neal Doren, center and guard; Willard Flor, right end; David Larsen, left half.

Letters are given for participation in half the intercollegiate games of the season, with the exception of this season, when letters were given for playing in two-thirds of the games. The reason for doing this was because this season there were very few games.

The captain for next year's team has not been elected yet, but will be at a meeting of the letter men Saturday evening.

The minstrel show, which will be given as a means of raising money to purchase sweaters for the men who earned letters, is progressing nicely and is receiving the support of all the students at the institution. The sale of tickets indicates that financially it will be a bigger success than the gala day exercises of last year. Aside from the student talent a number of the best amateur actors in the city have volunteered their services. Thursday evening, December 21, has been definitely settled upon as the date of giving the show.

The membership department of the Young Men's Christian association is so well pleased with the work of the boys it will ask them to repeat the show at the association rooms for the benefit of the members.

Jess Pedersen, the Danish wrestler, who is to meet Jess Westergaard in a finish match at the Auditorium tonight, will be in Omaha at noon today, according to a telegram received by Manager Gillan. He says he is in fit trim for a long battle and will demonstrate to the followers of the mat game in Omaha that he deserves a chance with Gotch.
