NEED OF OVERCOATS AND SHOES

One Big Firm Donates the Use of a Wagon to Help Miss Mace Collect Some of the Donations Promised.

The people of Omaha are responding generously to the call for clothing from the City mission, according to mission workers, but there is still a great demand for men's overcoats and shoes. The mission has no wagon to call for donations which cannot be brought and the Omaha Van and Storage company had a wagon out yesterday collecting these articles from the homes for the mission.

Another gift of practical benefit to the mission was a big pot of soup which the women of Trinity cathedral made. It arrived Tuesday evening and was served just before the soup service. What was left was served yesterday morning to men, women and children who came to the mission hungry.

Motorman Crushed Between Two Cars in Ames Ave. Barn

George Nelson, a motorman residing at 806 North Twenty-sixth avenue, was rolled and crushed between two street cars in the Ames avenue barn at 4:50 o'clock yesterday morning. He was conveyed to the Swedish Mission hospital, where it was found that a number of bones were broken and that he is possibly injured internally. His bruises are so painful that it is not possible for the attending surgeon, Dr. P. H. Ellis, to learn the exact condition of the patient. Nelson is 36 years old and has a wife and daughter.

To Have Sponsors or Not the Question

The captains, majors and lieutenant colonel of the high school cadet regiment may or may not have sponsors this year, according to the way each individual officer is set on the question. This was the substance of an agreement reached at a staff officers' meeting held at the school Tuesday morning.

License Inspector Would Raise Price

R. A. Schneider, city license inspector, is on the trail of fakery who have been "robbing the public." In a communication to the city council he requests the passage of an ordinance increasing the price of fortune teller's license to $60 per year, payable quarterly, and also wants them to put up a bond of $500. He asks for better regulation of meat markets and butcher shops and suggests that the council reconsider its action in placing on file the ordinance relating to the licensing and inspection of lodging houses.

SNOW IS SAVING THE STREET CLEANING FUND

Tom Flynn, street commissioner, has decreased his street cleaning force to such an extent that if it is not again increased this month he will save $2,000. Streets and sidewalks in several places are coated with ice that cannot be removed. Walks and pavements now in good repair are likely to remain so as long as the cold continues.

Omaha Men's Views on Unauthorized President Filings

Among interviews collected throughout the country on its demand for the inclusion of Colonel Roosevelt's name, with or without his consent, on the primary ballots in all states that are to have a presidential preference vote, the Chicago Tribune gives the following from Omaha.

Victor Rosewater, editor of The Omaha Bee, and national committeeman from Nebraska, today said regarding the proposed presidential primaries: "If Mr. Roosevelt is willing to stand as a candidate his name should go on our preferential ballot. However, I do not think the ballot should be loaded down with the names of men who are not candidates. If Mr. Roosevelt's name is placed on our ballot without his consent, that ballot would have to be open to the names of every man for whom anyone might want to vote. I think our Nebraska primary law is wrong in permitting the filing of a name without prior consent or later assent of the man who is to run."

Yates is Introduced to Real Black Hand

Behind the footlights Aubrey Yates is a simple, unglad youth in "Anna, Where Do You Live?" now being presented at the Brandeis theater. In his character portrayal he is ignorant of worldly wiles and pitfalls, but outside of the playhouse he has been given credit for being a pretty wise chap. His reputation as such held good until Tuesday night, when he weaved his way through boreal blasts from the theater to the Rome hotel.

Mighty Hunters Go Forth for Big Game

Herman B. Peters, proprietor of the Merchants hotel, and Sherman Saunders, well known grain man, leave today for Memphis, from which place they will go into the wilds of Arkansas to hunt deer and wild turkeys. They will meet Ray Pollard of the Campbell-Pollard Dredging company of Omaha, and after the deer hunt will go into the swamps of Arkansas in search of ducks. After the hunt they will journey on south, visiting at Hot Springs and New Orleans.
