Miss Bates was picked up wholly unconscious and carried into the Central cigar store, where a physician was called to attend her. While still in an unconscious condition she was placed in C. M. Atherton's automobile and taken to her home, where medical attention was continued to be given her. She was still suffering severely from the shock last evening but the fear that there might have been serious injury to the spine was dispelled.

The last one of the new giant flaming arc lights ordered by the city council was swung into place yesterday at the corner of Broadway and Benton street, illuminating the corner where the car line turns into Benton street. For each of the last half dozen nights installed special individual transformers were required, costing about $75 in each case. The lamp on Benton street and for those on North Main street the old feed lines had to be reconstructed and new and taller poles set. This added very greatly to the expense, but Manager English secured orders to do whatever was necessary to meet every wish of the city council in connection with the new service. The council has not yet given orders for the additional lights that have been decided upon in the vicinity of the Auditorium, but will do so probably at the next meeting. The next move is to secure the jacking up on Broadway all the way to the river, one at each street crossing on aerial wires. Those thus installed now, in contrast with those on the pedestals in the underground district, show that the aerial construction gives about 25 per cent greater efficiency than is realized by the other system. This one at each intersection would make the western part of Broadway a well lighted thoroughfare.

A business opportunity!

To business men, directors and stockholders and ambitious men looking forward to a business career:-

More than 2,000 invitations have just been sent out to the heads of corporations capitalized at $1,000,000 or more in various parts of the country by the Society Promoting Efficiency, of which James G. Cannon, president of the Fourth National Bank, New York City, is chairman. This meeting is arranged to be held in New York. The conference will provide a common meeting ground upon which those interested in business efficiency may become acquainted and exchange ideas.

It is a commonly accepted fact that a man is worth just $1.50 a day from his eyes down, but there is no limit to his earning capacity from his eyes up. The foremost question today in American business is, "How can the individual increase his efficiency to the highest degree?" That this question is pertinent is evidenced by the fact that, according to Bradstreet's Journal, "investigations over a period of years have demonstrated that tendencies present within the individual himself are largely responsible for four-fifths of all business failures."

Hundreds of business men

Attest the efficiency of the business training and service of the University selected by The Bee for its patrons.

The following letter, written by the president of one of the large banks is in point:

"The education given by the La Salle Extension University in its course in Business Administration could formerly only be obtained by hard knocks in the business world. Men who are practical in their methods and who will devote some time to the study will find themselves equipped for a business life far beyond their expectations.

Training sound pedagogically

The following is extracted from a letter written by a former president of one of the largest state universities:

"My investigation shows me that the La Salle Extension University is a sound concern, and it limits itself to those fields in which work can best be done by correspondence. The professors who have been secured to write the text books, many of them are known to me personally, are men of the highest rank. Their text books, prepared specially for the purpose, are extremely valuable. The methods of the LaSalle Extension University with reference to correspondence, help and examinations are sound pedagogically."

Service to business men confidential

Instruction personal

The lectures, information, solution of business problems and text are brought by mail to your home or office.

$2,000 would be a conservative estimate of the cost to get a modern training in business administration at any resident university PLUS your present earning, covering a period of about two years.

To the young man CAN YOU AFFORD THIS? To the business man: IF YOU COULD, WOULD YOU? The LaSalle Extension University was organized for the purpose of "taking the university to the people." Former president Eliot, of Harvard, has said the greatest need today is that of adult education.

Through The Bee's offer, this training is brought to you in the most direct and practical way at nominal cost. Sign the coupon and look into the greatest opportunity that you have yet had.

To the ambitious young man

You are looking forward to a business career. No ambitious young man wishes to remain at a stand-still. The only way that he can move up is to merit promotion. Because a young man is now occupied with the details of a little business, or probably no business, it does not follow that five, ten or twenty years will still find him clerking in a store or doing odd jobs around town. The Course in Business Administration conducted by the LaSalle Extension University teaches the young man how to earn promotion and how to fill the place higher up. Every earnest young man aspires to become known as a successful business man. Training today is absolutely necessary to this end.
