THE IMPERIAL

THE REVOLUTIONISTS ARE LOOTING THE STORES! I MEAR THE CRASH OF BROKEN GLASS, FORWARD

Desperate Desmond, the international crook, finds himself in a precarious position on the none too secure roofs of a pagoda, which is surrounded by Chinese revolutionaries. As Desmond is known to be an imperialist he will get no mercy from the crowd below. Claude, seeing that the villain cannot escape, enters the pageda in the hope of finding his beand, who has been spirited

In the pagoda the first object that catches Claude's eyes is the great statue of Buddha, and as there is little else to be seen he concludes that his Resamond must be hidden there. A little investigation discloses a door in the pedestal, and Claude quickly finds his sweetheart in-side. To keep her safe while the struggle for Desmond is continued he locks Rosamond up again in the statue and goes forth to aid the revolutionists.

overthrow of the Manchu despotism are many of them insufficiently equipped. So when those surrounding the pagoda in which Desmond is perched, try to rush the building they do some ground and lofty tumbling as their bare feet come on the broken glass. The villain laughs at the contorions of his enemies, but even yet he is far from safe. The the roof of a pagoda is no resting place.

of the imperior erty and set out at full speed for the pagoda, on top of which Desmond is roosting like a villainous sparrow. They are a ruthless lot, these cavalrymen and woe to the republican they
