Desperate Desmond

Claude Eclaire Shows That One May Be a Hero and Yet Have Some Brains

Copyright, 1911, National News Association

By Hershfield

On one side of a deep chasm are Claude Eclaire, his beautiful Rosamond and the Chinese soldiers. On the other side of the chasm are Desperate Desmond and the infant Emperor of China. Desmond has offered to give up the Emperor in exchange for the girl and the soldiers are compelling Claude to agree to the proposal. It is a terrible position for a lover and a hero.

Accordingly an agreement is made that the Emperor and Rosamond shall be handed across the chasm on long poles. Naturally they must be put across exactly at the same time, as if the villain once got hold of Rosamond he would refuse to give up the Emperor. Desmond, villain that he is, also suspects a ruse to get the best of him, but relies on his wits to prevent such a thing.

Now the tiny Emperor is being placed on the cliff alongside Claude, while Rosamond is suspendid over the sliff on the other side of the chasm. Desmond chuckles with glee to think that in a moment the proud beauty will again be in his power. Claude, however, does not seem sorrowful. Is it possible that he has a plan to foil Desmond? Study the picture and see.

Ah, ha, Desmond, you are baffled this time. Claude did have a plan to foil the scoundrel. Rosamond was lifted across the chasm on a hollow iron pipe and now Claude is shooting bullets down the pipe. Desmond cannot approach to seize Rosamond and his Chinese allies have taken to their heels. Score one for Claude Eclaire, brainful hero.

Quickly strong hands set about the work of hoisting Rosamond into the air and back to the cliff, where her lover, Claude, stands. The little emperor is also safely there and Desmond is alone and baffled. It is not often that Claude leaves the straight path of heroism for that of trickery, no matter in how good a cause, but this time he was compelled to fight fire with fire.

"I'm the boy," cries Desperate Desmond, 'but I'm up against it this time." The wretched scoundrel sees the United States troops approaching him on the cliff top and there is no apparent means of escape. It is about time that some of the wrongs he has done were avenged. Tomorrow we shall see all about Desmond's fate.
