FOURTH JURY DISAGREES

Five Men Listen to Testimony in the Midway Kid-Lifting Case.

ONE JUROR FAILS TO APPEAR
J. W. Thomas is in Iowa and Both Sides Agree to Try the Case Before the Five Who Report.

The fourth jury to hear the evidence in the case against Billy Crutchfield and Jack Bromfield, charged with violating the Bloomer law by keeping open after the prescribed hour, failed to agree in 15 minutes yesterday, after deliberating almost two hours. None of the jurors would tell how the jury stood after being discharged by Judge Foster. As usual a hitch occurred when one of the six jurors failed to appear, but by mutual consent of both sides the case went to trial with the bob-tailed jury. The missing man was Joseph W. Thomas, the president of the Corn Exchange National bank. Court Officer Glover called the name of Mr. Thomas and when he failed to answer, Glover announced that he had been unable to get service on him. He said Mr. Thomas was out of town.

The five jurors who heard the evidence were: Charles D. Deaney, real estate dealer; Henry R. McDonald, secretary of the Omaha Text and Awning company; Alfred O. Barker, of Barker Bros. Paint company; Thomas C. Rich, plumber, and Charles J. Krebs, clerk at Thos. Pacific yard office. The evidence in the case was the same as in the three former trials.

The jury after deliberating announced that they could not come to an agreement, but Judge Foster refused to accept the disagreement and told them to try to agree. Twice later the judge refused to let them out without they agreed. After being out one hour and twenty minutes the judge ordered them to be brought into the court room. "Did you come to an agreement?" asked Judge Foster.

"We did not your honor," replied Mr. Deaney, the foreman.

"Is there any possibility of your agreeing?"

"There is not."

After the trial Judge Foster was asked if he would grant another trial should he be demanded by Louis Platt, deputy county attorney, and he replied in the affirmative. Mr. Platt when asked before the trial if he would ask for another trial should this jury fail to agree said he in all probability would.
