TEST OF DIVORCE LAW UP IN DISTRICT COURT

After direct evidence showing that Frank Henson, charged with bigamy, married Maude Peterson less than six months after he had been divorced by his first wife, had been introduced before Judge Sutton, Henson's attorney moved for a direct verdict and called into question the meaning of the six months' legal prohibition of remarriage. He argued that the six months' prohibition is for no other purpose but to give defendants time to re-open divorce actions if they please. In the present case Henson appeared to answer his wife's suit, consented to her getting a divorce and expressed the desire that she get it. Therefore, he declared the divorce was in full force and effect as soon as it was granted. He asked an instruction to this effect. If it is given Henson must be acquitted. It is the first test of the law.

CRUSHED BENEATH LANDSLIDE

South Omaha Family of Six Has a Narrow Escape from Death. FATHER RESCUES LOVED ONES Driven Frenetic by Their Pitiful Moans and Cries He Digs Wife and Children from Four Feet of Earth.

Joe Madera, his wife and four little children were buried beneath tons of earth while they slept Sunday night in their home at 617 North Twenty-sixth street, South Omaha.

Madera with lionlike strength extricated himself from beneath the earth and heroically set about to rescue his wife and babies. He dug and clawed the earth frantically, driven almost mad by the pitiful cries of the buried loved ones.

Madera's home, which is a small, double cottage, is situated in a cut bordered on the north side by an embankment thirty feet high. The moderate temperature of Sunday evidently loosened the earth and for it o'clock in the night the embankment gave way and slid with tremendous force against the side of the house.
