IL-THE WATER RUSES Desmonth however, proves obdurate. He will not come out of the room, nor will he permit Resumend to cocays. As the water rises the two are floating higher and higher, and Rosamond fears that in a few minutes she will be forced against the ceiling and there suffocated. Even then the villain will not relent, and Claude's plan seems to be a failure.

III.-A MOMENT'S RESPITE. Floating up to the ceiling, Desmond and Rosamond come in contact with the globes encircling the electric lights. Here there is a little air—snough to keep life in them for a few minutes at any rate. It is not much of a respite for the heautiful girt, but it is better than drowning there. Claude cannot tell what is happening, but fears Desmond's villiany.

azement of the Chinese who owns the building, he sees a great flood of water spouting out of the basem windows. At once he collects his startled wits and summons the fire department in the hope of saving his building. He little knows that a precious human life is in danger within, to say nothing of the villain's wreched life.

V .- MAN THE PUMPS. V.—MAN THE PUMPS.

American machinery runs the world.

Even in this Chinese town the fire department is equipped with American pumps. These are quickly set to work pumping the water out of the basement in the hops of saving the property from further damage. The Cinese do not know that anybody is inside the flooded room.

infuriated by the flooding of the build ing, the Chinese have captured Desmond to the cell. Claude tries to explain that he turned on the water to save his sweetheart from the villain, but his caprors Tomorrow will show the result.
