PRINCESS LOLO A WONDER

Astonishing Mind Reading Feats of an Indian Girl.

ADOPTED DAUGHTER WHITE MAN

Blindfolded She Shoots Arrows From Cigar, Reads Words, Tells Numbers and Describes Objects.

In defiance of Prof. Hugo Munsterberg's assertion that mental telepathy does not exist, Lolo Chinkava, a seven-year-old Sioux Indian girl, is daily performing mind-reading tests which seem to show that she, at least, is able to divine what is in another person's mind.

Whether she inherited the power of mental suggestion from her Indian forebears—she is a granddaughter of Chief Rain-in-the-Face, who fought with Sitting Bull at the battle of the Little Bighorn—or developed it herself is not known. Her first exhibited evidences of her unusual mental power at the age of 4 and by constant practice has developed it until today she can do the most astounding feats apparently by mental suggestion.

With her foster father, J. L. Cotton, a former Indian agent who adopted her at the death of her parents, she has been appearing recently in the Percy Williams chain of theaters about New York giving exhibitions of her power of mental suggestion.

Treated by Experts.

While her performance on the stage is remarkable—blindfolded she can read all the cards or letters her foster father selects from scores of persons in the audience—it was a private test held in a New York office building before a gathering of experts that really revealed her remarkable ability.

Mind reading tests on the stage are always open to suspicion. Dozens of alleged mind readers have been exposed again and again. The part of this "dian girl's" performance in which she shoots a cigar from the mouth of her foster father with a rifle when blindfolded and makes other wonderful shots without the aid of her eyes is above suspicion, but an audience is entitled to doubt her power of mind reading for the reason that the methods she employs are similar to those used by many other "mind readers" who are known to work by means of private codes.

When Cotton goes through the audience asking for letters and cards and then asking Lolo, who is blindfolded on the stage, to tell what is written on them, it is quite possible for his questions to indicate what his answers should be. Various "mind readers" have employed codes successfully.

But in the private test which was given to Lolo she told what was written on cards and envelopes without having anything spoken to her. In fact, her foster father was in another room during some of the tests, and as they could not even see each other any communication other than through transmission was impossible.

Testers Stumped.

After reading the names and addresses on a dozen or more envelopes and letters which were shown to Cotton in rapid succession as she does on the stage, Lolo submitted to three tests which none of those present could explain.

In reading the names on the envelopes and cards Cotton asked her, after seeing each one, what was written on them. She read every name correctly, but there

JACKRABBIT RAIDS FOR FOOD

Hordes of Famished Buntings Attack Granaries in Western Kansas.

Made desperate by hunger, hordes of famished jackrabbits are raiding the farm yards and feed lots on western Kansas ranches, according to reports from that section of the state, and robbing cattle and other live stock of their food.

Deprived of their usual food by the deep snow which covers that section of the state, the rabbits invade the farms and granaries and cause great loss to the ranchmen. Where corn has been left in the shock, or where hay has been stacked, the little animals congregate by thousands and in their desperate straits eat thousands of dollars worth of grain and other feed that is greatly needed by the farmers for their stock.

No numerous are the rabbits that it is impossible for the farmers to protect themselves from them. Thousands of the animals have been killed and many by her foster father twenty yards away, thousands of them have died from starvation, but there appears to be little diminution in their number.

Some farmers report that the rabbits have invaded hog pens and by sheer force of numbers driven the hogs away from their food, one farmer whose reputation for truth and veracity is good, reporting that he saw a drove of rabbits invade his hog pen, take care of corn in their jaws and leap back over the fence and retreat to a safe distance to devour their loot.

Frank Winslow, a ranchman in Hodge county, also said that he had seen rabbits invade the hog lots and grab corn out of the mouths of the hogs.

"Every day since the big snow," Mr. Winslow said, "the ranch hands have been feeding a bunch of cattle in the feed lots, but they reported that the stock appeared to be growing weaker and thinner. I made an investigation and found that as soon as the hands would get the feed dumped on the ground and leave for other fields that hordes of jackrabbits would rush upon the feed and devour it."—Kansas City Star.

Naming the Boy.

Old Jim, gardener and general factotum, was accompanied one day by a bright-looking lad 8 or 10 years old.

"Is this your boy?" I asked.

"Yes, he is, the last one I got, sub-Junior, you wuzless nigger, make you manners to do white folks."

"Junior," I commented.

"Nawuh," the old man replied, rather indignantly, "he ain't names for me! My name Jumbo, what my mammy git out'n the Bible. Dis boy's name Junior cos he was born in June."—Lippincott's Magazine.
