Desperate Desmond

Even in a Snowball Fight There Is No Hope of Getting the Villain to Be Fair

By Hershfield

I.—AT LONG RANGE.

Away on the desolate Siberian plains Desmond and Claude, villain and her, are engaged in a strange long-range duel, which is being fought with heavy snowballs, no insignificant weapons when frozen hard. This duel calls up boyhood days to Claude, when he fought mimic battles around snow forts; but alas! those happy days have gone.

II.—A FORGOTTEN CHAIN.

Even Rosamond has to throw, as best she can, snowballs at her hero lover, Desmond has no pity. The villain in taking up the snow has uncovered a heavy chain, such as is used for shackling the unfortunates who make the terrible journey to the Siberian mines. Needless to say, Desmond plans some treachery with its aid.

III.—A CHAIN OF SNOW.

A plan has occurred to Desmond in connection with the chain that he has so unexpectedly discovered. Desmond may be a villain, but he has a quick mind. Who knows but he might have been a college professor had his life been guided into other channels? He quickly covers the chain with snowballs until it looks like a string of white beads.

IV.—THE WHIRLING CHAIN.

Whirling the heavy chain with its covering of snowballs around his head to give it speed, Desmond lauches the strange missile in the direction of Claude. A string of white beads we said it looked like—but oh! a deadly string, and the white beads may presently be stained a red that will appall those unhappy enough to see it.

V.—READY FOR THE CATCH.

Claude's keen eyes see the link of snowballs shooting rapidly toward him, and he thinks that they are transfixed by a stick. As Claude had been in his day the most noted outfielder of his school baseball team, he confidently prepares to intercept the stick and thus gain a lot of ammunition to use against his ruthless foe

VI.—ENCHAINED!

"Ow!" exclaims Claude, utterly taken by surprise as the heavy chains, interrupted in its flight, winds itself around and around him. It is with a cruel sneer that Desmond sees the success of his plan and turns to flee again with Rosamond, who weeps at her lover's discomfiture. But cheer up, brave girl; to-morrow you may be avenged.
