German Women to Discuss New Home
German women of this city interested in the new club house project of the Omaha Musikverein will meet Monday evening at the music hall of the Schmoller & Mueller company to discuss plans for a new hall where concerts may be given, meetings of all kinds held and lectures may be heard.
The Woolworth home on St. Mary's avenue has been bought as a club house, but now the women say they need a large hall which may be used for a variety of purposes. It is proposed to erect this hall on the same property as the club house.
The women feel that they need a place of this sort, where concerts may be given, a building equipped with reading and rest rooms, as well as rooms where smaller meetings may be held as well as a large lecture room.

O'DONNELL IS SUSPECTED OF PASSING SAWS INTO JAIL
Mertie O'Donnell was arrested yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Cahill and Macomber, who charge him with having given Jack Lorraine several steel saws and files which were used in the unsuccessful attempt at jail delivery last Thursday.
O'Donnell was in jail at the same time with Lorraine two months ago, in the juvenile wing, and the deputies say that the plot was hatched then. After O'Donnell was released he visited one of the prisoners in jail and is alleged to have given them the saws and files then.

A HOPE WELL GROUNDED
Cheerful Consumptives Have Reason and Experience on Their Side.
The old doctors, who were fond of Latin, called it "Spes phthisica"—"the consumptive hope."
It seemed a pathetically false hope at a time when consumption was ranked with the incurable diseases.
Now we know that the consumptive hope is deeply grounded in reason, science and experience.
Between seventy-five and ninety per cent of all cases of consumption, including many that seemed hopeless, are curable.
The chief weapons in the war for health are fresh air and Osmolium.
Consumption is a tricky disease that often sneaks into the lungs in the innocent guise of a slight cold.
Fights that cold from the first cough with Osmolium, and the consumption germs won't get a chance to take hold, to harm you.
Even where the disease is well developed, Nature, with Osmolium's aid, will make sound tissue so much faster than consumption can tear it down that every day brings perfect health nearer.
Thus is "the consumptive hope" justified.

Sample Bottle Free by Mail.
That those who are seeking health and strength for themselves, children, relatives or friends may experience the life-giving properties of this exclusive Norway gold medal awarded cod liver oil medicinal food emulsion—as well as to know Osmolium superiority—in being most palatable and easy to take—a generous 3-oz. bottle will be sent by mail to those who send addresses by postcard or letter to Osmolium, 545 Pearl St., N. Y.

In Saturday's magnificent production of "Hamlet" Mr. E. H. Sothern demonstrated to a crowded house that he is the greatest Shakespearean actor on the American stage today. William Winter, dean of American dramatic critics, has accorded to Robert Mantell the premier ship of our Shakespearean stage, but Mr. Sothern never played any character of Shakespeare so splendidly as Mr. Sothern portrayed the Prince of Denmark. Mr. Mantell's Lear and his Richelieu are regarded as his best efforts, but neither of them has the force of authority, the comprehension of command or grief, the sustained execution or the perfect reading that Mr. Sothern gives to his Hamlet.
Sothern's Power as Hamlet.
The power of Mr. Sothern, as he brought it out in the "mouse trap" play scene before the king and queen, was magnificent. He lay back against the chair occupied by Ophelia and watched every move and every look of the king like an animal guarding its prey. The sudden rising of the king brought Hamlet to his feet in a storm of words, spoken so that the whole court shrank in awe to him. He rushed at the king like a raging bull and mingled the secret triumph of his scheme with the open effort to get revenge for the death of his father. The stage business in this climax was ideal, the whole room being cleared in a few seconds. It was so splendidly done that the large crowd stormed its approval.
Mr. Sothern's Hamlet is one of spiritual misery. He is brooding deeply when he enters in the second scene of the first act. Nothing in the room interests him and he sits silently, with face unresponsive and almost white. The calling of his name brings a subtle shifting of the shoulders and a radiance of thought to his environment. The grief of Sothern's Hamlet is expressive before the meeting with the ghost. After the apparition has determined his future course, the grief is submerged in a half-crazed man, a prince of fiery determination, haunted, dejected and bewildered.
In handling the principal scene with Ophelia, Mr. Sothern was gracious and severe. He evinced some signs of love for this young girl, but seemed more interested in her as an acquaintance and not as a sweetheart. When he told her fatherhood he drew away from her with splendid theatrical effect, and became a cold, commanding youth to whom Ophelia meant no more than an unloved woman. She had proved her unreluctance. Late in the closet scene Mr. Sothern showed his splendid conception of the role. It is not a mad prince, but the avenger of a father's wrongs, who hurls the soul of the queen-mother. This has always been one of Mr. Sothern's strong scenes, and is splendidly done.
Miss Marlowe's Ophelia.
Miss Marlowe played Ophelia as the dutiful daughter, obedient in every stage. She was sweet, kind, and gentle in all, but in her mad scene acting she came out of the weak, docile character just sufficiently to give her interpretation the strength of a mind protesting in grief against the wrongs she had suffered. She was gentle, supremely pathetic, and the embodiment of pathos in her last appearance on the stage. She always was pathetic enough to provoke sympathy from any one.
The performances of the other members of the company were as brilliant as in the other plays. Mr. Frederick Lewis made a true Hamlet, seeming kind, generous and loyal. The Laertes of Mr. Sidney Mather lacked effective force in some of the scenes. He was powerful in the duel play. Mr. Rowland Buckstone gave to the character of the gravedigger an ideal interpretation.
The staging of the play was the most beautiful used in any of the four productions presented here.

It is hard to conceive how a woman of the dominating beauty and great intellect of Miss Marlowe could fall completely in love with any man the first moment she looked upon him. She is not the kind of blended physical charm and masterful feminine mind that would pierce the piercing of her heart so that her charmer would instantly know that he had gained ground. For this reason it was a slight shock to yesterday's Boyd patrons to witness Miss Marlowe, tender, soft and adorable, give way to revealed emotions the instant that Mr. Sothern as Romeo removed his mask in the scene dance at Capulet's home.
Most Satisfactory of Juliets.
But whether the true character of Juliet be consistent with the real personality of Miss Marlowe is only of passing interest, since this fascinating woman is the most beautiful embodiment of sweet Juliet on the stage today. She is deficient in no great detail in her impersonation of this lovely woman. She is delicate and emphatic in portraying the various moods of Juliet.
Joyful, sparkling and ebullient, she presented herself in the second scene of the first act, where she and the nurse are seated. Her soft, gentle, charming voice of hers struck attentive chord in every auditor. Her eyes burned with gracious, splendid womanhood and she evinced a spirit of play—so winning and delightful as when she carelessly touched her surroundings with a flower. She would have made an ideal companion at this time for a care-free youth searching to amuse himself with a highly refined, yet pleasure-enjoying maiden. In the first meeting with Romeo Miss Marlowe's animated personation was essentially strong. Her subtle touches in the balcony scene of the play. The cunningly arranged attitude and the soft sweetness that controlled her voice when she said, "O, swear not by the moon, the inconstant moon," will long remain a delicious memory of Miss Marlowe.

Sothern a Gloomy Romeo.
Mr. Sothern's Romeo is splendidly conceived, and he was at all times thoroughly impressive. The early moments of the play found him always a supremely sad youth, and so he was all through the play, only excepting his first appearance after his marriage with Juliet and his balcony scene. Mr. Sothern's Romeo is a gloomy, well thinking youth, who seems almost dazed by a cloud of impending misfortune. He is a somber figure, always, beside the joyful, cheerful Juliet of Miss Marlowe. Mr. Sothern's interpretation during the first meeting with Juliet revealed the deep effect of the attractiveness of the young woman. From the time he first looked into her eyes until he departed from the room he did not permit his eyes to fall away from her. In the tomb Mr. Sothern's acting flashed with the power of his capabilities. Miss Marlowe was splendid in her death scene.
Sneakthieves Busy in Rooming Houses
Five complaints were made yesterday and last night to the police by persons living in rooming houses and hotels, who say that their belongings and clothing have been stolen from them within the last twenty-four hours during their absence.
The first complainant was Charles Doerflinger, 607 South Thirtieth street, who lost a suit of clothes and some small change. Fred Hare of Minden, Ia., reported the loss of a pocketbook containing $5, which he says was either stolen from him in the elevator of the Paxton hotel or was taken from his room. Carl Coleman, Missouri Pacific hotel, reported that an unidentified roommate of his decamped with his clothing and a silver watch, and William Rock of the Carey hotel lost a pair of shoes. E. C. Houser, an expressman living in Iowa City, said that while intoxicated he rented a room in some Douglas street lodging house and was robbed of $10 and some clothing in a suit case.
The police think all of the jobs were done by different persons.
FERNE NICOLE'S DESIGNS OMAHA UNIVERSITY SEAL
The board of trustees of the University of Omaha, after some lengthy consideration, has chosen an official seal for the university. It is a circular emblem of silver, inlaid with crimson and black enamel, with the school colors around the edge. In the center of the design are two gates representing "Omaha, the Gate City" and overlooking the gate is the eye, symbol of education. The design was made by Miss Ferné Nicole of the junior class. The seal, in addition to being used as the official emblem of the university, will be worked into pins, belt buckles, hat pins and buttons. One Omaha jeweler already has given orders for several.

DELEGATE FOR INAUGURAL OF PRINCETON'S PRESIDENT
In response to an invitation to participate in the inaugural exercises which will induce Dr. Hibben to officiate as the new president of Princeton in May, Chancellor Avery has asked Victor Rosewater of The Bee and formerly regent of the University of Nebraska, to represent the state as its delegate. Mr. Rosewater has indicated that he will serve if he can arrange his engagements to permit.
NEBRASKA UNI BASE BALL SQUAD IS GETTING BUSY
LINCOLN, Neb., April 7.—(Special).—Base ball practice has occupied considerable attention during the last week, and the squad is now rounding into shape. Thirty players have reported to Stehman, including five catchers, eight pitchers, five infielders and twelve outfielders.
Those showing up the best in practice are Boal, Parson, Towle and Kruse, catchers; Carr, Rodman, Dreyer and Purdy, pitchers; Underwood, Funk, Kline, Haskell and Flory, infielders, and Oliver, Hyde and Fike, outfielders.
Trouble is being encountered in arranging a schedule. The lateness of putting a team in the field has tied up the management and thus far no games have been scheduled outside of those with the Lincoln league.
OMAHA UNI PICKS TEAM TO DEBATE WESLEYAN MEN
Stanton Salisbury, Robert Strehlow and George Percival have been chosen to represent the University of Omaha in its debate with Nebraska Wesleyan University the first week in May. Some time ago a squad of six was selected, which has been working on the question, and Friday the final selection was made. The forensic contest will be held at University Place and Omaha will argue the affirmative of the question. "Resolved, That the tariff of the United States should be determined by a non-partisan board of tariff experts, constitutionally granted."
It is easy for a candidate to promise things for the future, but the best test of what he will do is what he has done in the past.
In the selection of your city commissioners, we call your attention to Jeff W. Bedford.
He has been a citizen and taxpayer for thirty years. During that time he has filled many positions of public trust and has at all times been efficient and trustworthy.
During the panic of the early '90s Mr. Bedford was president of the Germania American Savings bank. This was the only savings bank in Omaha that did not fail. Its officers saw the handwriting on the wall and notified the depositors to come in and get their money, 100 cents on the dollar, with interest. Mr. Bedford and the principal stockholders assumed and paid the liabilities.
As a public official, Mr. Bedford has at all times worked in the interest of the taxpayers. Believing in the future of Omaha, he has devoted a large part of his time to the upbuilding of the city, knowing that what was good enough for Omaha was good enough for him.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Mayor-Elect Hector Says Will Give Good Administration.
BUSY OVER NEW COUNCIL
No Certainty Yet Who Will Be Chosen President of Organization—Old Deal Blocks Meeting of Body.
"I am not looking for further political preferment and have nothing to deter me from following out the right as I see it," said Mayor-Elect Thomas Hector yesterday. "During the next two years I intend to give the people of this city the best administration they have ever known," said the mayor.
In the framework of the new council Hector is taking no part, although his interest is keen. He expressed the hope that his new council would be a harmonious body, working as one for the best interests of the whole city. Many men are learning that the big good natured boss has a way of saying no when he wishes to convey the idea of his dissent. Already he has ruled that 1,000 names of those who did not vote will be ineligible for any position under the city department. He stated that in making appointments he would be guided more by the fitness and capability of the applicant for a position than by any political ties.
Among the other departments of the city matters are still unsettled. Clerk Perry McD. Wheeler is going into office with the determination of making his department efficient in every sense of the word. Clerk Wheeler proposes at the outset of his term to introduce economy into his office. It is said that Wheeler will do away with two and perhaps three out of the office, which, it is understood, can be run by three men. It is understood that Wheeler has already made his appointments, but is withholding them for the present.
The council organization is still misty and unformed. Jack Walters, it is understood, wishes to be president of the council. Henry Harstett is also in the race and friends of Tom Alton insist that he head the city fathers. Among the republicans and some democrats it is thought that a compromise on Jay Williams would solve the whole dispute happily enough.
Another Theater Coming.
Another theatrical venture will be tried out in South Omaha as soon as Nicholas Amos has secured a proper site upon which to erect a modern and thoroughly well equipped building to be used as a vaudeville house.
Amos is the head of a string of vaudeville and moving picture houses throughout the state. He owns places in Lincoln, Omaha, Council Bluffs and South Omaha.
Amos' new venture will be the second of the kind launched in South Omaha during the last week or two. The latest recent deal was the purchase of the vacant lot at Twenty-fourth and M streets, where Frank Dolezal and Rudolph Yehout will erect a modern theatrical building, where high-class vaudeville will be the bill. The plans of the Dolezal-Yehout theater arrived yesterday at the real estate office of Joseph Murphy, who has engineered the deal up to date.
No Quorum of Council.
Saturday afternoon was set for the final act of the present city council, but although a quorum of the membership assembled at 2 o'clock, a bad connection somewhere resulted in the adjournment of the council because of no quorum.
In a committee meeting of the council there was a renewed discussion of the Allen bond deal for $100,000 which hangs fire at a considerable cost to the city. Allen promised to accept or reject the bonds within ten days after making his offer. The ten days have lengthened out to considerable over thirty days and still the matter remains in statu quo as far as the purchase is concerned. The council informally discussed the matter yesterday and grumbled over the delay and consequent loss to the city.
Another item and one that proved to be the principle of disintegration in yesterday's meeting was the revival of the old fire hose deal which amounts to a bill for $2,000 against the city. The bill is one of two that accrued from the purchase of certain fire hose during the last year. In a committee meeting of the council the matter stated: "The old council is anxious to clean up all its business and there was an attempt made to get together on the fire hose deal. It failed so far." It was just after the above statement was made that the councilmen indicated that there would be nothing doing in the way of business yesterday evening.
The adjournment was irritating to Joe Mallender, who has been for weeks trying to get the right to open up the banner of the O street viaduct so as to give him ingress and egress upon his abutting property, where he will build a $20,000 building.
Holdups Get Five Dollars.
G. W. Smith, 213 J street, South Omaha, was held up last night within a few steps of his own home by two masked men who took $5 from him. Both made their escape and owing to the darkness Smith was unable to tell whether the men were white or black. The police were notified, but they have nothing upon which to work and the capture of the strong arm men is unlikely.
Howard Found Unconscious.
John Howard, said by the police to be an epileptic subject, was found in an unconscious condition this morning on Twenty-fifth between M and N streets. Howard was found by one of the employees of the Glynn-Gafford Transfer company, who reported the matter to the police. An investigation revealed that Howard in falling had struck his head against the curb. Dr. A. H. Koenig was summoned and found a compound fracture of the right jaw and a severely bruised head. Howard was removed to the South Omaha hospital.
Heflinger Wants Re-count.
Fred Heflinger, defeated democratic nominee for councilman from the Third ward, will ask a recount of the votes against Councilman John Riba, the successful candidate.
At the same time the dispute between John Badura, democrat, of the Fifth, and Steve Wawryszkiewicz, republican, of the same ward will be solved.
Riba has a present plurality of twenty-one votes and he claims that a recount will give him more. Badura has a present lead of six votes over his opponent, who insists that a recount will likely give him the seat.
The canvassing board will meet tomorrow for the official count of the vote.
Lithuanian May Go Free.
Unless the state of New York intervenes, Matthew Arluacklune, the Lithuanian accused of bigamy, will probably go free of the further restraint of the laws of Nebraska.
Arluacklune is confined in the city jail under accusation of having committed bigamy some years ago. It now develops

Man Wanted in Omaha Captured in Seattle
Lloyd H. Kingsbury, alias Spenger, wanted in Omaha on a charge of obtaining money on alleged worthless checks upon representation that he was a federal employee in the Department of Agriculture, was arrested yesterday in Seattle, Wash., by the United States marshal there. He will be taken to Pittsburgh, Pa., for trial.
Kingsbury when here worked under the name of Spencer, and passed a check for $20 on Jesse Merritt, clerk at the Hotel Rome.
He came nearly being apprehended once by H. D. Mills, head of the local branch of the secret service department, but when the arrest was about to be made he disappeared.

KNIFED Old Soldier's Story of Coffee.
An old soldier, released from coffee at 72, recovers his health and tells about it as follows:
"I stuck to coffee for years although it knifed me again and again." (Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it contains caffeine—the same drug found in coffee.)
"About eight years ago, I was taken with a very severe attack of malarial fever. I would apparently recover and start about my usual work only to suffer a relapse. After this had been repeated several times during the year I was again violently ill.
"The doctor said he had carefully studied my case and it was either quit coffee or die, advising me to take Postum in its place.
"I had always thought coffee one of my dearest friends, and especially when sick, and I was very much taken back by the doctor's decision for I hadn't suspected the coffee I drank could possibly cause my troubles.
"I thought it over a few minutes and finally told the doctor I would make the change. Postum was procured for me the same day and made according to directions. Well, I liked it and stuck to it and since then I have been a new man.
"The change in health began in a few days and surprised me, and now, although I am 72 years of age, I do lots of hard work and for the past month have been teaming, driving sixteen miles a day besides loading and unloading the wagon. That's what Postum in place of coffee has done for me. I now like the Postum as well as I did coffee.
