MENDELSSOHN CHOR PLANS

Further Information Concerning the Coming Concerts.

COLERIDGE-TAYLOR AND VERDI

Sketchy Data on Personality of the Men and the Works that Will Be Given by Choir and Orchestra.

The Mendelssohn choir concerts in conjunction with the Theodore Thomas orchestra of Chicago received the official endorsement and support of the Commercial club of Omaha at a regular meeting of the executive committee some days ago and the Commercial club of Omaha at a regular meeting of the executive committee some days ago.

A very determined attempt is being made to draw attention to the fact that the concerts are to begin at 8:15 p. m. sharp and the matinee at 2:30 p. m. sharp. Last year the large audience was so late arriving that the choir and orchestra had to wait almost half an hour before beginning.

There is much interest in the presentation of the dramatic scene from the song of Hiawatha, entitled "Hiawatha's Wedding Feast," the words from Longfellow and the music from the pen of that original genius, S. Coleridge-Taylor. It will be given on the second night, Tuesday, April 23.

The question is often asked: "Where did this man get his Indian music ideas?" The answer is said to be that he found them out through interpreters for the Indians in the Buffalo Bill Wild West show when it was staying on exhibition for a long time in London.

He looks like a full-blooded negro, and here is a bit of his biography, as given in the Washington Post when his work was first produced in this country.

The father of Samuel Coleridge-Taylor came from Sierra Leone, on the west coast of Africa, to England to study medicine. Here he married a white woman of English parentage, and from this marriage was born the child that was to become one of the greatest of modern composers.

The Mendelssohn Requiem of Verdi, from which there will be some excerpts presented on the opening night, Monday, April 22, has created quite a bit of curiosity and attention, this being its first presentation in Omaha: the name given to this work by Verdi, the "Mansoni," is the name of the famous Italian poet and novelist from whose memorial it was written. This work is the most brilliant and dramatic setting of sacred words in the true Verdi style. While the language is the language of the church, the music is the music of the dramatic writer and colorist, the immortal Verdi, the Verdi of "Aida" and "Otello," perhaps, rather than the Verdi of "Trovatore" and "Rigoletto," but Verdi throughout, except in the "Sanctus," which is a strict fugue for a double choir, written in the form of a strict old master of harmony; yet so alive is the fugue that there is no suggestion of the pedagogue, and the members of the Mendelssohn choir enjoy the singing of it perhaps better than anything they do.

There is an interesting incident in connection with the "Requiem," which may not be generally known.
