Desperate Desmond

Look What the Villain Gets for Peeping Through a Keyhole—And Be Warned Yourself

By Hershfield

I—IN THE CHIEF'S OFFICE.

Beautiful Rosamond, helpless in the clutches of that fiend in human form, Desperate Desmond, is compelled to remain outside the door of the room occupied by the dreaded Chief of the Third Section. To whisper the name of this head of Russia's secret police is enough to scare the bravest hearts that beat in the revolutionary party.

II—PEEKING.

Outside Desmond can no longer control his curiosity as to the fate that is befalling his rival, Claude Eclaire, in the room of terror. So, having no nice scruples, the scoundrel stoops to peek through the keyhole, a low habit even for a villain. But, as we have said, Desmond has absolutely no scruples and he is anxious to gloat over Claude's sufferings.

III—THE TRAP.

However, the officials of the Third Section are no fools. They have anticipated that some stranger would try to discover the mysteries of their office, and purposely left the keyhole unblocked as a bait for those who would spy upon them. Also, as you may see by glancing at the third picture above, they have prepared a mechanical device to surprise peekers.

IV—BUMPED.

Just as Desmond is congratulating himself that he will soon be able to get a good view of Claude in the clutches of the police, the little surprise is sprung by one of the alert officials. The fake doorknob shoots out and gives the villain a terrific crack in the eye, thus fitting the punishment to the crime. Too late Desmond gets wise.

V—TAKING HIS CLOTHES.

Rosamond, who has been a helpless spectator of Desmond's actions, now sees her opportunity to get the better of the half-stunned villain. She hastens to his side and quickly takes Desmond's famous hat, which he has worn in all the continents and most of the world's capitals. Rosamond intends to take the scoundrel's coat also as a disguise.

VI—THE VOICE AT THE DOOR.

It is impossible to imagine the surprise of Claude Eclaire when he hears through the door of the police room the voice of his sweetheart, Rosamond. The brave girl is demanding admittance in the name of Desperate Desmond, and while Claude does not know her plan, he has every faith in her quick wit. How she fares will be shown in tomorrow's pictures.
