WINTER WHEAT KILLED BY CHILL AFTER THAW

H. Duhlstrom of Ceresco, Neb., at the dillard, reports winter wheat in the South Platte country in poor condition, especially in the western part of the state. He says many farmers are plowplan to plant open and other grain in its stead. It appears that a hard crust formed after the ground was left bare of snow early this spring and the weather following the thaw killed the seed underneath in large patches.
