Over the transom is out for Colonel Guffey.
No doubt General Diaz is enjoying himself.
The Harvester trust is still able to get credit, it seems.

What are stained glass windows between friends? says Mr. Bryan.
Bunker Hill monument survived the recent storm in Massachusetts.
New, for at least three years, there is really no good cause to blackwash Omaha.

Earthquakes, added to revolution, seems a little more than even Mexico deserves.
The base ball scout realizes the forces of Mr. Gray's magic words, "Full many a gem."
We take it for granted those women policemen in Chicago are not to wear hobble skirts.

Every state has its favorite son, but some, including Iowa, have queer ways of favoring them.
Why not rally the Boy Scouts to a general assault upon the dandelions and flies, when they come?
The man who says he has a sure cure for dandelions belongs at the head of the A class in the Ananias club.

Mr. Bryan's Choice
Mr. Bryan evidently is not yet convinced that Governor Harmon is out of the race for the presidential nomination.

And it is highly probable that the Nebraska's choice will not be revealed until the last moment in the convention. He knows the full truth better than any can tell him of a premature announcement.

Exemplifying Lincoln's Vision.
Standing on the field of Gettysburg, Abraham Lincoln saw through the mists of war and disunion the day when the contending armies, or their surviving remnants, would meet again on this battleground.

The "immediate and compulsory" purchase of the Omaha water plant has been delayed a little longer than nine years, but that will not keep people from wondering why the $7,000,000 of bonds were secretly sold at a ridiculously low figure.

The World-Herald accepts the result of the election with commendable resignation, but fails to explain how it happened that the democrat didn't endorse led all the rest.
"Dahlman would be an anomaly as governor of Nebraska. As mayor of Nebraska's largest city he is evidently fit," says the Lincoln Journal.

The causes of insanity are so diverse as to make the disease, if it may be called such, extremely difficult of treatment and yet it is admitted that science has never been put to the supreme test in its effort to restore a dethroned reason.
Usually, as once was the case with tuberculosis, insanity was simply accepted as hopeless and the patient confined in an asylum, not to be restored to rationality, but only to be cared for in a humane way until he died.

It is puzzling some florists to decide whether the excessive dry and hot spell of last summer or the unprecedented cold of the winter killed the vines around the porch.
Another of the interesting features of the primary law is that while Senator Brown received a majority of the votes cast in fifty-three counties and Congressman Norris led in only thirty-eight counties, the aggregate vote gives Norris the claim to represent the state.

in life represents an economic unit. And, of course, this is but the last and least consideration.

Government by Minority.
Were the legislature now to abolish the party circle, the practical effect would be to require all amendments to be submitted by petition under the initiative.

The foregoing is an excellent summing up of the condition that will prevail when Nebraska shall have adopted the initiative and referendum, and other various reforms that have been suggested as necessary to bring about the approach of a political millennium.

The building of the state medical school in Omaha is still a source of great worry in Lincoln, but the doctors who graduate therefrom will be all the better equipped because they have had the advantages that a large city can afford for study and investigation.

It is heard, from the government side of course, that 65 Mexican federal troops severely defeated a force of 1000 insurgents. When the returns got in from the insurgents they will tell that 65 insurgents wiped up the earth with 2000 federales.

The practice of providing lifeboats only for passengers and leaving the crew to drown no longer meets the approval of the British tars, who insist that some provision should be made for their escape. The manufacture of lifeboats and life rafts has received a great impetus and so soon as the equipment can be provided vessels of every sort will carry means of escape for all persons on board.

A glimpse into the mystery of womanhood is afforded by the testimony of Daniel Buckley before the senate committee now engaged in the Titanic investigation. Buckley says he got into the sixth lifeboat while the officers of the ship were driving men back from the boats with revolvers. He was crying and some woman—he thinks it was Mrs. John Jacob Astor—threw her shoulder over him and saved him from being dragged back to the sinking ship.

Looking Backward
This Day in Omaha
COMPILED FROM BEE FILES
MAY 10

Thirty Years Ago—
Mrs. J. H. N. Patrick gave a ladies' lunch at Happy Hollow, there being present Miss Woolworth, Miss Brundage, Miss Ruzin, Miss Collins, Miss Wakeley, the Misses Wilson and Miss Berlin.

The Omaha branch of the Irish National Land League held a special meeting, with P. B. Murphy chairman, and John Groves secretary. Resolutions denouncing the assassination of Lord Cavendish were adopted as reported by a committee, consisting of M. Donovan, F. M. McDonagh, John Rush and James C. Brennan.

The council having passed the ordinance granting a franchise to the new Nebraska Central Railway company, Mayor Bemis sent a communication to that body announcing his approval of the ordinance. He also approved an ordinance providing for a special election May 12, to allow the voters to decide whether they should appropriate bonds of $200,000 to aid the railroad projectors.

Rev. William Baldwin of the Christian Advocate, accompanied by Mrs. Baldwin, Dr. Downey, Dr. James and Mr. and Mrs. A. Smythe, left for a tour of Colorado. The Omaha presbytery met at the First Presbyterian church and formally dissolved relations between the First church and its retiring pastor, Dr. W. J. Harsh, at the latter's request. He had a charge to which he was going in New York.

George W. Meyer, returned from Denver, accompanied by Mrs. G. A. Staker, who came to spend a while at the Meyer home. Mrs. H. Hindschick and Miss Clara Hindschick, residents for five years of Omaha, left for Detroit, their future home.

Stinson Bloom went to Chicago to attend the district grand lodge of the B'nai B'rith. The Jacksonville club held a meeting when it was expected to hear the report of the condition of South Omaha democracy, but W. H. Hertman, who had the report, decided it was a good thing not to disclose, so the evening was willed away with speeches. Dr. A. H. Rippe expressed the view that the time had come to get loose from the hallowed ratio of 15 to 1 as the basis of silver coinage.

A son was born to Captain and Mrs. W. E. Groves, 107 Park avenue. According to testimony on the price of food given before the New York state commission the average retail grocer in the Empire state is a self-sacrificing public benefactor, who uses weights and measures as implements of generosity.

Samuel J. Killow of Imboden, Ark., has just annexed his tenth consecutive wife. What happened to the preceding Mrs. Killow is not mentioned in the account of the last wedding bells. As the bridegroom is 58 and the bride 64, with three previous experiences, Mrs. Killow entertained no fear of the discord.

The wheelbarrow is the high cost of meat on the packers, the packers blame the farmer, and the farmer lays it to the high price of corn. That puts the ultimate blame on the man who falls to heed the call of "back to the land." What the public, which has to pay for it who ever is to blame, would specially like to know is how much the extra price of corn is multiplied in the transition process from fodder to dressed beef.

Army Gossip
Matters of Interest On and Back of Piping Line Gleaned from Army and Navy Register.

A Board of Officers at Fort Myer, La., has compiled an interesting and useful list of officers of the cavalry, field artillery, coast artillery and infantry, arranged on one list in accordance with original rank. The grades given are those taken from the army list of February 29, 1911. The list shows also the year of entering into the service, beginning with 1870, the year when the senior officer on the list—Colonel McClelland of the cavalry—entered the service.

The president will seat to the senate in a few days the nominations of the civilian candidates who passed the examination of January for appointment as second lieutenants in the army. The next appointments to the grade will be those of the graduates of the Military Academy in June. These will be followed by the appointment of those enlisted men who qualify in the final examination for appointment as second lieutenants in June.

In anticipation of the enactment by congress of the clause in the army appropriation bill authorizing stoppage of pay for absence from duty of army officers or enlisted men who are disabled by reason of intemperance, etc., the War Department officials are discussing the means by which this provision may be carried out.

An unusual case has lately engaged the attention of the military authorities. It is that of a former enlisted man of the Tenth cavalry, discharged from the army at Fort E. Allen, Va., at the expiration of his term of enlistment in August of last year. The man remained in the town of Essex, Va., after his discharge and in January the attention of the post commander was called to the fact that the man was ill and helpless in a vacant house near the reservation.

Cause and Effect. Philadelphia Record. The western farmers of late years have been abandoning pasturage and cattle-grazing fields to plant more corn. But there are at this time neither corn nor cattle enough in the country. Supply falls far short of demand.

Passing the Blues Along. New York World. The wholesalers blame the high cost of meat on the packers, the packers blame the farmer, and the farmer lays it to the high price of corn.

Reasons for Hopefulness. Cleveland Plain Dealer. The Heppesford, the automobile bandits of Chantilly and the dynamiting of Bonnet, lead sensitive Americans to the hopeful conclusion that an occasional train robbery or a semi-occasional lynching does not prove the accidental rapacity to be beyond comprehension.

SMILING REMARKS.
Cholly—I wonder what makes my eyes so weak?
Miss Keen—Perhaps it's because they're in a weak place.—Boston Transcript.
So you are going to make a new will and cut some of the present legates out.
Yes, I am going to give some of my relations the fresh air treatment.—Baltimore American.
What you need, said the worthy medic in his ponderous way, is an enlargement of your daily round, a wider circle of activity.
"Mobley that's right," said the patient. "I'm a bareback rider in a one-ring circus."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
That man is a great reasoner," said the thoughtful citizen.
Yes, replied Farmer Corotossel. "He's one of those people that lose your confidence because you know they're smart enough to convince you whether they're right or not."—Washington Star.
Maude—When you broke the engagement, of course you returned the diamond ring he gave you.
Ethel—Certainly not. I don't care for Jack any more, but my feelings have not changed toward the ring.—Boston Transcript.
Caligula had made his favorite steed a Roman consul.
The two-legged one," he said, "don't seem to have any horse sense."
Which little plebeian so cheered him that for five minutes he didn't order the drowning of any of his faithful subjects.—Chicago Tribune.
"Sorry, old man, I called you a fool. I should have remembered the well known injunction.
You mean the verse which says that he who calls his brother a fool is in danger of everlasting fire?
No, I mean the saying: "The truth should not be spoken at all times."—Chicago Tribune.
You seem to be an abridged man. You ought to be strong enough to work. I know, mum. And you seem to be beautiful enough to go on the stage, but
