

For the WOMEN FOLK

Sponsor for Regiment

Tomorrow will be an all important event in the social calendar of the Omaha High school for their sponsors for the 1912 cadet regiment will be presented by the commissioned officers of the drill corps who are eligible to pick a military miss for that honor.

Miss Katherine Davenport, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Clarke, 212 West street, will be the sponsor of the regiment. Malcolm Baldrige, son of Howard H. Baldrige, being the lieutenant colonel who makes the choice. Miss Davenport is a member of the Ky Dues club, one of the most prominent senior girls' social organizations, and is very popular at the school, both among the students and faculty. Several other sponsors have also been selected from the ranks of the Ky Dues, everyone of which will wear a military mien tomorrow when they are presented to the cadets.

The sponsor question has caused considerable comment all year and many of the commissioned officers averred some time ago that they would have no feminine influence to guide the affairs of the privates and non-commissioned leaders of the drill corps. It is certain that there will be at least three "bachelors" out of the eleven eligible officers of the regiment.

The presentation ceremony will be held on the school campus and students as well as cadets will be present. Several interesting features have been planned and each girl who is chosen for an honored function will make a little speech to the youthful soldier boys and perhaps even give a few commands of the manual of arms to show their efficiency as a sponsor.

Engagements

An engagement announced in a novel and interesting way was that of Miss Rose Helen Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Walker, to Mr. Harry Tristram Bellamy of Wellington, O.

The names of the betrothed young couple were placed in pink and gold envelopes, which were used as place cards at the announcement luncheon given by Mrs. Walker this afternoon at her home, 411 North Thirty-ninth street. Beside each envelope or place card was a miniature cupid and the names were pierced with gold arrows. A pretty decoration of pink roses was used at the luncheon and the afternoon was spent playing bridge, when twenty guests were present.

The wedding will take place June 17 at the home of the bride. Miss Kathleen Ryan will be maid of honor and the bridesmaids will be Miss Louise Cotter and Miss Adelaide Hogan. Mr. Dwight Becker of Jackson, Mich., will be best man.

The bride was a student at Sacred Heart academy and graduated from St. Francis school at Columbus, Neb. Mr. Bellamy is a graduate of Ann Arbor.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Pleiss announce the engagement of their daughter, Antonette to Mr. Frank Wickert. The wedding will take place at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, June 4, at St. Joseph's church.

Miss Marie Mik is expected home today from Paris. Her mother, Mrs. Joe Mik, will give her first concert at Brandeis, Tuesday, May 28.

Comparison of musical entertainments least no satisfactory end, and therefore it is not necessary here to recall any of the other musical treats of the season just closing; only let it be written that the Russian Symphony orchestra bewitched a fair sized gathering in the Boyd last evening with an extremely brilliant program, some numbers of which were applauded by every hand in the house. That the audience was not larger reflects no credit upon Omaha, for the pleasure given by this New York organization deserved a packed house.

In every part it was a grand concert. The orchestra played intelligently, efficiently and comprehensively. It had great regard for quality of tone; the softest threads of the daintiest web were smoothly and delicately unwound, as in the light fantastic "Dance of the Fairy Dolls" and the "Dance of the Millions," by Tschaiakowsky. The various moods were delicately sustained; the pace, the accent and the tone were finely wrought. Modest Altschuler conducted precisely, discriminately and surely, blending and shading in a manner that seemed perfect. He waved his arms comprehensively and commandingly in every instance, and gained, it seemed, just the smoothness and brilliance that he sought. Mr. Altschuler's conducting is the most excellent that Omaha has seen this year.

Lydia Lopoukova gave three of her graceful dances—the purest and most delicate exhibitions of the year. Three singers of the company were heard—Vera Curtis, soprano; Eva Mylott, contralto, and La Bonta, tenor. Exceedingly prolonged applause proclaimed each of these artists a delight. Mr. La Bonta has a wonderful voice, clear, strong and warmly colorful. He used it to fine advantage in singing a selection from Puccini's "La Boheme." Miss Curtis was applauded enthusiastically. The purity of her voice and her command of the art of song were shown in her solo and in the "Rigoletto" quartet selection.

Musorgsky's "Babaia" on "Moskva River" was engrossing and impressive. The languorous melodic notes of the opening caught the listener's ear, and peacefully caressed him. He was able to follow the slow, yawning movement of the early morning, the breaking of the quiet, the crowing of the cock and the gradual opening of day; followed by the gathering tumult that roused him into the fullness of the bright day at the close of the music. The varying moods, the slowness of the slumber music, the beginning of lively action and the mounting noise were brought out in a melody that enraptured the entire audience.

Tschaiakowsky's "Pathetique" was warmly applauded. The conductor and his orchestra subdued every tone and amplified the diversity of this music, bringing to the listener a glorious rendering in which clarionets, flutists, violinists and drummers created a musical beauty that was glorious. The two Tschaiakowsky dances were suggestive of the vanishing and the evanescent, reflecting the fanciful images of the composer's mind. Tschaiakowsky's "Isl" was concentrated into a melody that clamored with the sound and cry of battle, bursting into the final with the brasses and drums painting a striking tonal picture of the joyful celebration of the Russians over the retreat of Napoleon.

Local Notes of the Stage.

Louise Dresser, the famous musical comedy star who is the chief attraction at the Orpheum this week, believes that it is the duty of every woman to improve her personal appearance. "A graceful carriage and a good skin go a long way toward making a woman good looking," she said, "and according to my belief no one can walk well who is not comfortably attired. I am a large woman and so I wear everything loose. My shoes, my gloves and my gowns are all half a size too big. I choose to be comfortable so that I can walk ten miles a day and not be tired, or to run after a street car if I want to without fear of tripping."

In almost every city that Miss Dresser visits, she is invited to give a lecture on health to women. Whether she will do so in Omaha has not been decided.

At the moment that the raised arm of Lincoln Beachley, seated in his aeroplane, drops, the audience at Boyd's theater commencing Thursday matinee will start on a fascinating and wonderful ride via Leoman H. Howe's "Travel Festival." It is the signal for the "deck hands" to "let go." Simultaneously the engines begin to purr and the heart sensation is that of flight across the grass at the rate of what seems to be a thousand miles a minute. The vibration of the engines, and the thrills of speed through the free air afford a delight so keen, so unadulterated and so mysterious, that it defies analysis. As you are lifted ever higher and higher, the world seems to disappear beneath you and the terrific speed of which you were so conscious at the start seems lessened, though in fact it is greater. The means that you are infected with the aviator's disease—over-confidence. Then you begin to wonder whether you are traveling on the face of the wind or simply hanging in the air as though on an inflated cushion, but you are suddenly awakened from your reverie by that weird whiplashing dart back to earth.

Other noteworthy scenes of Mr. Howe's new program are an exclusive reproduction of the burial of the historic Maine, a ride on a diligence through the mountain fastnesses of New Zealand; a trip through the famous Royal Gorge of the Arkansas river in Colorado; surf riding by Hawaiian natives; a remarkable drill by the Redham Driftnet, London; the latest winter sports in Switzerland and a pictorial tour through Japan during which the land of the chrysanthemum is revealed in all the rich glowing colors of nature. The scenes take the audience to the sacred deer park at Nara; to the ancient shrines and temples at Nikko; to a thrilling boat ride through the rapids of the river Magdalen, etc. Matinees will be given daily.

While I was on the farm I took it before each meal and found that it gave me a better appetite and sleep became refreshing.
