

I.-THE ESCAPING FLEET

Desperate Desmond, the International crook, through the aid of some insurgents-Cuban insurgents, not republicanhas gained possession of a small fleet of battleships and is about to sail out of the harbor of Santiago. In this attempt he is opposed by Claude Eclaire and the American battiships.

MY HERO AND I

MUST NOT ESCAPE OUT OF ANTIAGO BAY I'LL EMULATE

Needless to say, Claude Eclaire is not to be caught napping. He is always on the alert where Desmond is concerned. He soon spots the villain's scheme to slip out of the harbor, and instantly determines upon a plan to upset Desmond's calculations. Claude will blockade the

III -- A NEW HOBSON

Alone upon a merchant vessel, Claude Eclaire pilots it into the channel through which Desmond's fleet must pass. He recks little of the shot and shell splashing around him, so long as he can accomplish his object. When the ship sinks our hero swims away.

IV .- BELOW THE SURFACE.

Desmond is never without two strings to his bow. Fearing that Claude would try to sink a ship and blockade the channel, the villain has stationed his submarines under the surface, and when the ship sinks, the submarines support it and carry it safely out of the fairway.

V .- A HERO'S FAILURE.

From his place in the bow of one of the American ships, Claude is astonished to see the masts of the ship he sunk moving quickly away and leaving the channel clear. It is a bitter disappointment to our hero, after risking his dife in such a spectacular exploit.

VI.-CLOSING THE CHANNEL.

The sunken ship having been removed, Claude determines that some other means must be taken to block Desmond. So our hero gets a huge chain, and with powerful strokes, he swims out with it. How his new attempt succeeds will be shown
