RYDER EXPLAINS MOISE VISIT

Walter Approaches Commissioner in Suave, Diplomatic Way.

SHERIFF IS GIVEN GODSPEED

City Official Tells McShane's Friend that There Are None to Be Favored Nor Enemies to Be Punished.

Police Commissioner Ryder declares that he was approached by Walter Moise, a brewer, and that "the gentleman had in his suave and diplomatic way" insisted that certain friends of Sheriff McShane be allowed to sell booze on the quiet the sheriff might be induced to "let others alone." Ryder makes this reply:

"This is a queer game we are up against here, and as I have had occasion to say before the only way to play it is in the open. The World-Herald had two articles that should have some attention. One was to the effect that Chief Donahue and myself have been conferring with the county attorney as to how the segregated district can be re-established.

"No such conference was held, and I have never even thought of trying to beat the Albert law in any manner. The other article told of two deputies of the sheriff serving notices to close up certain places where liquor is supposed to be sold after hours. Once before I gave the sheriff godspeed in any work of that kind he cares to do, and again I say this department will not be sore or jealous, but will be well pleased with anything he can do in this line. We are short-handed, anyway, and the few officers available for this service may overlook somebody who ought to be arrested.

Friend of the Sheriff.
"Touching this feature, Walter Moise, who is a good friend of the sheriff, has been to see Chief Donahue and myself several times lately. He suggested in his suave, diplomatic way that there ought to be some understanding between this department and Sheriff McShane as to what would be done in the way of raiding lawbreakers. He was bluntly told we had no advice to give the sheriff and no advice to ask from him; that Sheriff McShane knew his duty and would probably discharge it in his own way; that we have no friends to protect or enemies to punish. That statement did not please Mr. Moise, but he hastened to deny that he had come from the sheriff or had any talk with him on the matter.

"Before he left, however, Mr. Moise let the cat out of the bag and opened my eye to what he probably had in mind. He suggested that Abe Rabinowitz, who runs a drug store at Sixteenth and Howard, has more influence with Sheriff McShane than any other man in town. I could not see the relevancy of this statement until Mr. Moise followed it with the delicate intimation that if Rabinowitz were permitted to sell a 'little beer' the sheriff might be induced to 'let some others alone,' presumably to sell some beer, too.

"Then I tried in the plainest language I can command to tell Mr. Moise again, and yet again—because he is a persistent gentleman—that if any big or any little places were running that the police have overlooked he should urge the sheriff to get busy. We are trying not to overlook any, and I do not believe we have; but as a brewer and a wholesale liquor dealer perhaps Mr. Moise has information he can give the sheriff on which that officer can act. I don't believe Mr. Moise will give any such information to this office.

"Let me repeat what I said shortly after taking this office: If a man is clean he need not fear the health officer."
