FAREWELL TO CONSTITUTION

J. L. Jones Pictures the Millenium of National Government.

SENATE AN UNNECESSARY BODY

Sociologist and Lecturer Tells the University Club of Some Things the Cities Might Do.

Jenkin Lloyd Jones, sociologist and lecturer, speaking at a banquet held in his honor at the University club yesterday afternoon, outlined in brief what he considered the ideal millenium of national government.

He touched upon practically every plank of the republican and democratic platforms of the last twenty years and went so far as to recommend the abolishment of the federal constitution.

In its stead, however, he would have one that would contain the executive, legislative and judicial form, but which would broaden the powers of congress.

"I believe that the United States senate is an unnecessary body. The house of representatives, with a lesser number of members, should have control of the legislative branch of the government.

This would insure greater efficiency and expediency in the passage of remedial and necessary legislation."

Mr. Jones passed on to the provision of city charters of different states for which, he claimed, the cities of larger population should be invested with state rights, and be allowed to govern themselves by their own legislatures, governors and judiciaries.

Some national questions that Mr. Jones alluded to and for which he contended: The adoption of a standard medium of exchange to replace the precious metals, going away with the idea of "specie wealth" and not its exchange value.

Abolishment of the tariff and in its place free trade in all imported commodities.

Investure of courts with the power to interpret the laws and curtail their right to legislate.

Covers were laid for fifty. E. U. Graff was toastmaster. Because the time was limited Hans P. Freese of New York, who held a conference hour in the afternoon at the university, did not follow Mr. Jones.

MORMON APOSTATE ATTACKS CHURCH AT SUMMER SCHOOL

Hans P. Freese of New York, whose father was one of the Mormon elders who walked from Florence to Utah, whose mother was a plural wife and he a lecturer against the church of his youth, gave a vivid recital of the way he claims polygamists have worked their way into American politics, yesterday afternoon at the University of Omaha at the Summer school.

"Mormonism is marching on," declared Mr. Freese. "Politicians have to take cognizance on account of the votes they control and their hold on the business world." He told of the power of Mormon elders in keeping a plank against national convention; of their power with the railroads because of their strategic geographical position between east and west; of their keeping literature against polygamy from being published. He declared that the reason a constitutional amendment making polygamy a crime could not be passed was because there are so many senators and representatives sent to Washington, not to work actively for Mormonism but to prevent any measures against it.

STREET CAR EMPLOYEES CUT UP REWARD MONEY

Conductor Emerson and Motorman Adams are each jingling $250 extra money in their pockets. These are the two men who, single handed and alone, last May captured and delivered to the police Roy Parson, a bandit who attempted to rob their car at Forty-fourth street and Boulevard.

The street railway company pays a $500 reward each time that anyone catches a man who attempts to hold up and rob one of its cars. At the time when Parson held up the Boulevard car, Emerson and Adams grappled with him, took away his gun and made him their prisoner.

Both Emerson and Adams are comparatively new men with the company. They entered its employ in August, 1910, but did not get regular runs until a short time prior to the capture of Parson.

Range Country Fine, Says Mr. Rooney

Thousands of cattle are being shipped from the dry sections of some of the southwestern states to the western and northwestern part of Nebraska, where the range is good, according to W. R. Rooney of Chadron, who was at the Henahaw yesterday afternoon.

He says the range was never better in the world than this spring.

"We have more range than cattle," added Mr. Rooney, "and that is why we are shipping in the cattle. The alfalfa crop this summer gives great promise. Ordinarily the ranchers let the first crop of the season go to seed and cut it for the seed, after which they take the subsequent crops for hay. This summer, however, the rains have been so abundant that the first crop grew so rank that it was not thought best to try to let it go to seed. They have cut this for hay and expect to harvest seed from the second crop."

Joseph Settl, 263 South Sixteenth street, was attacked by a crowd of boys at Sixteenth and Vinton streets last night and knocked unconscious from a blow over the head. He is about 14 years old.

Returning home from the store he was waylaid by rowdies and beaten over the head with a ball bat. It was nearly an hour before he regained consciousness. He was attended by Police Surgeon Elwood.
