

Desperate Desmond

I.—THE CHASE. Desperate Desmond, the international crook, is now surrounded on the top of the grandstand, which overlooks the arena of the Olympic games. Gallant Claude Eclair prepares to climb up after the villain who has brought so much trouble into the lives of Rosemond and himself. All the athletes will aid him.

II.—A HUNTED RAT. On top of the grandstand Desmond sees his pursuers gather around him. He is like a rat in a trap, and like a rat he seeks a dark hole. The villain picks a plank out of the roof, for he knows that the inside of the stand must now be deserted. Desmond must take a long chance in dropping so far.

III.—A HIGH DIVE. It is a long drop from the roof of the grandstand, but Desmond has no other chance of escaping, and he knows how roughly the athletes would handle him if they got the opportunity. To the villain's relief, he sees an enormous basket of flowers below. This will not only break his fall, but afford an excellent place of concealment.

IV.—THE PRESENTATION. The huge bouquet is a present from the beautiful Rosemond and, needless to say, it is intended for the heroic Claude, who competes for the honor of America. In a few well chosen words, a distinguished Swedish official makes the presentation to Claude, who blushes and stammers out a few words of earnest thanks.

V.—THE HIDDEN SNAKE. Little guessing that he is helping his deadly enemy to escape, Claude, with the courteous assistance of the Swedish official, bears the huge basket of flowers to his dressing room. Our hero is more than usually pleased with himself for he has done well in competitions and now has this token of Rosemond's love.

VI.—FREE AGAIN. "Ay ban the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "and ay skot get revenge on this bar Claude." The villain, when Claude and his Swedish friend retire, quickly frees himself from the flowers, and sets about his escape. He plans the capture of the fair Rosemond, and his adventures will be continued in tomorrow's paper.
